Pearl Harbor's 25th Anniversary Observed

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

From state capitals to college campuses, in churches, and on highways, millions of Americans remembered Pearl Harbor today on the 25th anniversary of the Japanese attack that brought the United States into World War II. Some of the observances took note of the Viet Nam war.

For some individuals, such as Husband E. Kimmel, the 84-year-old retired admiral who says he was blamed for America's worst naval defeat, the remembrance of Dec. 7, 1941, stirred up bitter memories.

That day a quarter of a century ago also left some footnotes to history: on the evening of the Pearl Harbor attack, Eleanor Roosevelt calmly scrambled eggs for guests at the White House, according to a journal among the manuscripts the Library of Congress in Washington put on exhibit to commemorate the 25th anniversary.

Hundreds of men who knew the horror of that December 7, a date which President Franklin D. Roosevelt said "will live in infamy," gathered in Pearl Harbor for the main commemorative ceremonies.

Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York ordered flags on all state buildings lowered to half staff this morning, then raised to full at noon "to remind us that we will always, with the grace of God, achieve final victory."

A special Mass was offered at Loras College in Dubuque, Iowa, for the Rev. Aloysius Schmitt, a Loras alumnus and Navy chaplain who was killed on the USS Oklahoma during the Japanese attack.

The Mass also was in memory of other chaplains and laymen of the Dubuque Roman Catholic diocese who died in action, including the Rev. William Barragy, another Loras alumnus killed recently in the Viet Nam war while serving as an Army chaplain.

Veterans groups in Carlsbad, N.M., asked residents of the city to observe a minute of silence at noon in conjunction with the sounding of 34 sirens. Motorists were asked to pull over to the side of the road.

At the University of New Mexico in Albuquerque, brief ceremonies were scheduled at a tower housing the bell from the USS New Mexico, a World War II ship. The tower honors university students killed in the war.

The William Seely School in Groton, Conn., named for the first Groton boy who died in World War II, planned ceremonies including the presentation of a plaque to be mounted in Seely's memory. Seely was serving aboard the USS Arizona when the ship was bombed at Pearl Harbor.

In two-day ceremonies beginning today, Utah State University in Logan will dedicate its new "Center for the Study of the Causes of War and Conditions of Peace."

In an interview on the eve of the Pearl Harbor anniversary, Kimmel said at his Groton, Conn., ranch house that his being blamed for the naval defeat is "a bum rap."

"My principal occupation — what's kept me alive — is to expose the entire Pearl Harbor affair," said Kimmel, who on Dec. 7, 1941, was the No. 2 Navy man in America. He was the commander of the combined U.S. and Pacific fleets.

Kimmel was relieved of command 10 days after Japan knocked out 18 ships and killed 3,435 Americans, and in three months he was retired.

"They made me the scapegoat," he said. "They wanted to get the United States into the war."

Asked who he meant by "they," Kimmel replied: "That was President Roosevelt and Gen. George Marshall and others in the Washington high command. FDR was the architect of the whole business. He gave orders — and I can't prove this categorically — that no word about Japanese fleet movements was to be sent to Pearl Harbor except by Marshall and then he told Marshall not to send anything."

Kimmel, white-haired and alert, added: "God willing, within the next year, you'll see a couple of books published exposing the whole rotten mess."

Death Penalty Sought

By Warren Sokolis

JACKSON -- The prosecuter in the Tommy Lee Thompson trial, which began this morning, made it clear in his opening statement that he will attempt to prove that Thompson is guilty of first degree murder and will ask for the death penalty.

Thompson is charged with the gun slaying of Mrs. W. R. Lewis on Feb. 1, 1965 at her home in Sikeston. Thompson 18, is from Sikeston.

Scott County Prosecuting Attorney Fielding Potashnick said in his opening statement today that he will attempt to prove that:

Mrs. Lewis was shot in the back by a high powered rifle and that Thompson was standing at an outside window when he fired the shot.

A side door of the house was found open. Undergarments on the body had been cut or torn and it is likely that she was sexually molested.

The gun used in the slaying belonged to a man who lived up highway 60 east from the Lewis home and that this man's house was broken into the same night of the slaying and $50 in half dollars were taken from the house.

The prosecutor said that he would attempt to prove that a $20 gold piece was taken from the Lewis house, that Thompson gave the same gold piece to a friend, who gave it to his mother who, in turn, gave the coin to her employer. The mother is employed as a domestic.

Potashnick said that he also will try to prove that:

Thompson was seen spending several half dollars following the slaying and that he had admitted the killing of Mrs. Lewis to his family and to a friend.

Tom Arnold, one of three defense attorneys, in an opening statement today said that Thompson has denied the crime. He stated that the evidence presented by the prosecution will leave great doubts as to the guilt of the accused.

A jury of 10 men and two women was selected Tuesday night after 6 p.m. in the court of Circuit Judge W. Osler Statler. More than 90 persons were questioned in preliminary screening Tuesday.

The oft-postponed trial opened Monday, with a closed pre-trial hearing among defense lawyers, the prosecutor and the judge. The hearing was held to determine what evidence would be permitted and what would be inadmissible.

The judge ruled Monday the youth's alleged confession inadmissible because adequate evidence was not given showing Thompson was advised by police of his right to counsel during questioning.

Questioning of witnesses began later this morning in the first degree murder trial of Tommy Lee Thompson of Sikeston.

The first witness called to the stand and questioned by Scott County Prosecuting Attorney Fielding Potashnick was Clyde Poe, Scott county coroner.

Poe stated that Mrs. Lewis was dead when he arrived at the scene between 8 and 8:15 a.m. Feb, 2, 1965. He said she had a gunshot wound in the back and that the bullet had passed through the body.

Four exhibits were presented to Poe for identification: a picture of the body, a blood stained blouse found on the body, a girdle with the bottom part torn, and a pair of women's pants, which were torn and blood stained in the crotch area.

Poe identified the clothing articles and stated that each was found on the dead body of Mrs. Lewis. He further stated that he had noticed that the girdle was torn before he attempted to remove it.

The defense attorneys did not direct any questions to Poe.

Second witness called was Dr. Thomas A. Lovinggood of Cape Girardeau. He had examined the body following Mrs. Lewis' death and stated that the cause of the death was the gunshot wound.

Defense attorneys had no questions.

Third witness called was Lt. James Stone, Sikeston Police Department. Stone said he conducted an investigation of the Lewis house and made diagrams of the scene. He stated that he saw the body in the kitchen.

Pictures of the house were then entered as evidence. Stone stated that a large hole was found in the double window of the kitchen. He testified that to his knowledge no fingerprints were found at the scene.

Scott County Deputy Sheriff Ed Michael took the stand. He

Third Murder In Three Days Stuns Memphis

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Memphis, once known as the murder capital of the world, puzzled over three cases of violent death in as many days after a liquor store clerk was slain Tuesday night.

The latest victim was Hillman Robbins, 55, father of Hillman Robbins Jr., 1957 national amateur golf champion, Walker cupper and one-time member of the professional golf tour.

The elder Robbins was shot to death in a liquor store on one of the city's busiest thoroughfares. He was lying in a pool of blood, his hands tied behind his back with a grass rope.

Robbins was a clerk in the liquor store. Its cash register was cleaned out.

Another man was found dying early Tuesday at the foot of a long flight of store steps leading to a vacant house. Raymond Johnston, 56, a machinist, died of a severe beating.

The first case came to light Monday when an autopsy showed Dr. Neil H. Sullenberger, former surgeon in Michigan and Texas, had been beaten and shot. His body was found Sunday in a water-filled sand pit near the Wolf River.

Sullenberger, center of a nationally publicized medical controversy in Michigan in the 1950s, disappeared Nov. 17 after his evening shift at John Gaston City Hospital, where he was chief of the emergency room.

A billfold containing papers and identification but no money was found on Sullenberger's body. His 1966 automobile was found abandoned near a farm home near Stanton, Tenn.

Sullenberger was barred from Pontiac (Mich.) General Hospital in August of 1958 on charges of personal misconduct.

In an unusual public hearing fellow surgeons charged him with 25 cases of unprofessional practice, including six cases in which patients died.

Sullenberger arrived in Memphis on Nov. 1 after three months as a psychiatric patient at Fort Roots Veterans Administration Hospital in North Little Rock, Ark.

Following the Robbins slaying, Police Commissioner Claude A. Armour cancelled all days off for the detective division and ordered it divided into three squads for round-the-clock investigation.

Police said an elderly white couple seen begging near the liquor store had been cleared.

Jewish Festival Of Lights Opens

NEW YORK AP -- Hanukkah, the eight - day Jewish "Festival of Lights," begins at sundown today.

The celebration marks the revolt led by Judah Maccabee against Syrian King Antiochus Epiphenes. After expelling the Syrians, the Jews rededicated the holy temple in Jerusalem.

At the temple, according to the Talmud only enough undefiled lamp oil was found for a single day's use during rededication ceremonies. But the lamp burned for eight days.

To commemorate the event, Jews now light one candle each night during the festival, until the eighth night, all the lights in the emorah or candleabrum, are ablaze.

J. C. Evans was fined $100, plus $20 costs, and given six months in jail on a charge of driving while intoxicated. He was released to go to Kentucky to get the money to pay the fine, leaving his car as security.

Since he has failed to return the court has ordered his car sold to satisfy the fine and costs.

Roy Wade was charged with careless and imprudent driving and for failure to have an operator's license. His total fines and costs were $50. James Young pleaded guilty to two charges; careless and reckless driving (drinking) and to improper registration. His total fines and costs amounted to $84, which he was unable to pay. He was held in the county jail.

Johnny Riley, Gary Miskell, and Ronnie Brooks were each charged with possession of intoxicating beer and were fined $50 each and sentenced to 30 days in jail but were released and given time to pay their fines.

Jerry Gray Shelton, charged with operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated was fined $100 and $20 costs.

Ozell West pleaded guilty to a charge of careless and reckless driving and was fined $25, plus $20 costs.

Jimmie Lon Taylor paid $100 fine plus costs for operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated.

Those paying smaller fines were Odell Wright Jr. $15 for following too close, Raymond Gamzles, $30 for driving on wrong side of road, Alfred Mitchell, $25 for careless and imprudent driving, and Marylin Rose Hulshoff, $15 for having no operator's license.

Elevated Train Mishap Kills One

CHICAGO (AP) - An elevated train ran off the rails during a rainstorm today and one of its eight cars plunged 30 feet to the ground, killing one person. Twenty-five persons were injured.

Another car was left hanging, one end attached to the train, the other resting on the ground.

The accident occurred near the Chicago Transit Authority station at 41st Street and Indiana Avenue on the South Side.

CTA officials said the cause of the crash had not been determined.

The train was carrying a light passenger load because during the morning rush hour the heavy travel on this CTA division runs from the South Side north toward the downtown business district.

Jones Announces Plans to Retire

Paul C. Jones, Kennett, Democratic representative for the 10th congressional district, announced Tuesday night that he will not be a candidate for the office he has held 18 years in the 1968 primary.

Jones made the announcement at a political meeting at the American Legion Hall.

About 200 Southeast Missouri Democratic leaders in the 16 county district attended the invitational banquet.

Jones said he had discussed the matter with his wife before deciding. He stated that he had been making more trips to the doctor's office in the past year and quipped that he is now 65 and has a medicare card.

"I don't want to be a part of a committee to pick my successor," Jones said.

Jones noted he could make a list of 25 persons in the room who he felt were qualified for the office. He did say he would oppose anyone who filed for the office, who he felt was not qualified.

The 10th district will encompass more territory in the next reapportionment, Jones continued. He suggested that the person, who runs, should have proved himself in a legislative or business way.

In connection with his remarks about the growth of the district and the job, Jones predicted that the persons, who campaign for the nomination in 1968 will spend at least a quarter of a million dollars. The one who wins, will probably have to spend $100,000 individually, he added.

Jones said he was not retiring from politics. He offered assistance and advice to whomever is elected. He started that he thought about retiring before the 1966 campaign but decided against it on the advice of many of his friends.

Gov. Warren E. Hearnes attended the banquet and paid tribute to Jones.

Hearnes stated that he felt he reflected the opinion of most of the persons in the district when he said he was proud to have been a constituent of Jones.

Hearnes also threw in a quip in regard to Jones' reminiscenes about his early career in the newspaper field. He said he knew he must have been a newsman when he heard him gripe about the affairs of Kennett.

Other state officials attending included Lt. Gov. Thomas Eagleton, Secretary of State James Kirkpatrick, and Attorney General Norman Anderson.

No States Meet All New Highway Safety Standards

WASHINGTON (AP) — No state now complies with all of the highway safety standards proposed by the federal government — and there are still more to come.

Degree of compliance with the first nine standards suggested for inclusion in state programs by the national highway safety agency varies widely.

Only three states, for example, require motorcyclists to wear crash helmets. But 20 states and the District of Columbia require periodic vehicle inspection.

The nine interim proposals were submitted to the states this week for discussion and study. Details are to be worked out later.

Dr. William Haddon Jr., agency administrator, said he hopes to send all proposed standards to the states by Feb. 28.

States must be implementing a safety program approved by the government by the end of 1968 or face possible loss of their highway safety funds and 10 per cent of their federal road building money.

There was little apparent criticism of the proposed highway safety standards during three meetings the agency held this week with state, county, local and other safety officials.

Drivers Hurt In Collision

A two-vehicle collision Tuesday at the intersection of highway 80 and route B, three miles west of East Prairie at 12:45 p.m., resulted in injury to both drivers.

Del D. Davis, 39, East Prairie, driving a 1964 Oldsmobile, came off route B and turned in front of a 1966 Ford pickup truck, driven by Theodore Miller, 70, Matthews.

Miller received a broken leg and arm, and Davis a concussion. Both were taken to the Missouri Delta Community hospital.

Davis was arrested for failure to yield right-of-way.

Tuesday at the west Mississippi river bridge approach, at 11:15 p.m. on highway 60, east of Charleston there was a three-truck collision.

A 1965 Ford truck, driven by George Marcus, 35, Humble, Tex., was towing a 1967 Ford pickup, when he lost control, causing the towed vehicle to turn sideways and strike a 1965 International truck, driven by Roy Shields, 29, Nevada.

Neither driver was hurt.

Auto Taxes Raised

CHARLESTON - Hunter Phillips, a member of the state commission, met Tuesday afternoon in the circuit court room to discuss equalization of the taxes in Mississippi county.

The meeting lasted for one hour and forty-five minutes. The commissioner set the increase on automobiles at 60 per cent.

Representing Mississippi county were County Judges, Bill Winchester, Lloyd Hall and Gilbert Bryant; Assessor Ed DeField, and Prosecuting Attorney Rod Ashby.

Phillips pointed out to a large audience and to the county court that the reason for the increase was to try to make uniform the assessed valuation all over Missouri. Although Mississippi county is lower than many counties there are other counties that also needed readjustment, he said.

Assessor DeField was told that all counties would use another valuation book next year after which the tax would be lowered between 15 and 20 per cent.

Many questions were raised. A tape recorder was used to record most of the session.

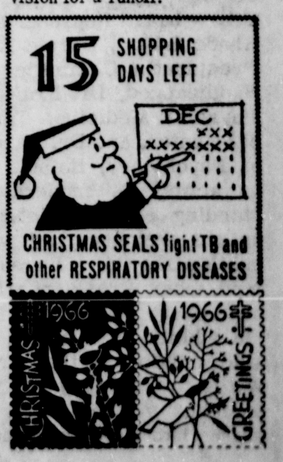
Batman Write-in Vote Leaves Election Tied

GAINESVILLE, Ga. AP -- Batman, television's caped crusader, holds the balance of power in a City Commission race, all because some joker put his name on a write-in ballot.

Amazed officials counted the votes in an election Tuesday for a city commissioner three times and each time got the same result.

Candidates Howard James and Joseph Stargel each received 674 votes and there was one write-in vote for Batman. The votes were made official.

City Atty. William A. Guner said he will have to do some extensive research to find an answer to the problem. Gainesville has never had a tie election before and the city's election machinery makes no provision for a runoff.



Viet War Cost May Hit $10 Billion Above Budget

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — President Johnson estimates Viet Nam war costs between now and next June 30 will exceed earlier budget projections by $9 billion to $10 billion.

He plans to ask Congress next month for a supplemental appropriation to bridge the gap, he told a news conference Tuesday in his federal building office suite.

The President remained mum about the possibility of a 1967 tax increase, but said facts needed to make a decision are falling into place.

Although Johnson had predicted earlier that war outlays would top the budget figures by anywhere from $5 billion to $15 billion, the figures he cited at the news conference were perhaps a bit lower than many observers had expected.

Since the chief executive had long been citing the forthcoming Viet Nam money request as a major item to be pinned down before a tax decision, he was asked if the new estimate — as well as a recent federal forecast that business spending on plant expansion would slow down — would help him make such a decision.

"The answer is yes," Johnson replied. "It gives me help. If you are trying to find out if a decision has been made, it has not been."

Johnson went on to say, in response to another inquiry, that he would not speculate whether the new Viet Nam cost estimate plus results of the business investment survey would make a tax hike more or less likely.

"People might get the wrong impression," he asserted.

Death Penalty Sought

By Warren Sokolis

JACKSON -- The prosecuter in the Tommy Lee Thompson trial, which began this morning, made it clear in his opening statement that he will attempt to prove that Thompson is guilty of first degree murder and will ask for the death penalty.

Thompson is charged with the gun slaying of Mrs. W. R. Lewis on Feb. 1, 1965 at her home in Sikeston. Thompson 18, is from Sikeston.

Scott County Prosecuting Attorney Fielding Potashnick said in his opening statement today that he will attempt to prove that:

Mrs. Lewis was shot in the back by a high powered rifle and that Thompson was standing at an outside window when he fired the shot.

A side door of the house was found open. Undergarments on the body had been cut or torn and it is likely that she was sexually molested.

The gun used in the slaying belonged to a man who lived up highway 60 east from the Lewis home and that this man's house was broken into the same night of the slaying and $50 in half dollars were taken from the house.

The prosecutor said that he would attempt to prove that a $20 gold piece was taken from the Lewis house, that Thompson gave the same gold piece to a friend, who gave it to his mother who, in turn, gave the coin to her employer. The mother is employed as a domestic.

Potashnick said that he also will try to prove that:

Thompson was seen spending several half dollars following the slaying and that he had admitted the killing of Mrs. Lewis to his family and to a friend.

Tom Arnold, one of three defense attorneys, in an opening statement today said that Thompson has denied the crime. He stated that the evidence presented by the prosecution will leave great doubts as to the guilt of the accused.

A jury of 10 men and two women was selected Tuesday night after 6 p.m. in the court of Circuit Judge W. Osler Statler. More than 90 persons were questioned in preliminary screening Tuesday.

The oft-postponed trial opened Monday, with a closed pre-trial hearing among defense lawyers, the prosecutor and the judge. The hearing was held to determine what evidence would be permitted and what would be inadmissible.

The judge ruled Monday the youth's alleged confession inadmissible because adequate evidence was not given showing Thompson was advised by police of his right to counsel during questioning.

Questioning of witnesses began later this morning in the first degree murder trial of Tommy Lee Thompson of Sikeston.

The first witness called to the stand and questioned by Scott County Prosecuting Attorney Fielding Potashnick was Clyde Poe, Scott county coroner.

Poe stated that Mrs. Lewis was dead when he arrived at the scene between 8 and 8:15 a.m. Feb, 2, 1965. He said she had a gunshot wound in the back and that the bullet had passed through the body.

Four exhibits were presented to Poe for identification: a picture of the body, a blood stained blouse found on the body, a girdle with the bottom part torn, and a pair of women's pants, which were torn and blood stained in the crotch area.

Poe identified the clothing articles and stated that each was found on the dead body of Mrs. Lewis. He further stated that he had noticed that the girdle was torn before he attempted to remove it.

The defense attorneys did not direct any questions to Poe.

Second witness called was Dr. Thomas A. Lovinggood of Cape Girardeau. He had examined the body following Mrs. Lewis' death and stated that the cause of the death was the gunshot wound.

Defense attorneys had no questions.

Third witness called was Lt. James Stone, Sikeston Police Department. Stone said he conducted an investigation of the Lewis house and made diagrams of the scene. He stated that he saw the body in the kitchen.

Pictures of the house were then entered as evidence. Stone stated that a large hole was found in the double window of the kitchen. He testified that to his knowledge no fingerprints were found at the scene.

Scott County Deputy Sheriff Ed Michael took the stand. He

Third Murder In Three Days Stuns Memphis

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Memphis, once known as the murder capital of the world, puzzled over three cases of violent death in as many days after a liquor store clerk was slain Tuesday night.

The latest victim was Hillman Robbins, 55, father of Hillman Robbins Jr., 1957 national amateur golf champion, Walker cupper and one-time member of the professional golf tour.

The elder Robbins was shot to death in a liquor store on one of the city's busiest thoroughfares. He was lying in a pool of blood, his hands tied behind his back with a grass rope.

Robbins was a clerk in the liquor store. Its cash register was cleaned out.

Another man was found dying early Tuesday at the foot of a long flight of store steps leading to a vacant house. Raymond Johnston, 56, a machinist, died of a severe beating.

The first case came to light Monday when an autopsy showed Dr. Neil H. Sullenberger, former surgeon in Michigan and Texas, had been beaten and shot. His body was found Sunday in a water-filled sand pit near the Wolf River.

Sullenberger, center of a nationally publicized medical controversy in Michigan in the 1950s, disappeared Nov. 17 after his evening shift at John Gaston City Hospital, where he was chief of the emergency room.

A billfold containing papers and identification but no money was found on Sullenberger's body. His 1966 automobile was found abandoned near a farm home near Stanton, Tenn.

Sullenberger was barred from Pontiac (Mich.) General Hospital in August of 1958 on charges of personal misconduct.

In an unusual public hearing fellow surgeons charged him with 25 cases of unprofessional practice, including six cases in which patients died.

Sullenberger arrived in Memphis on Nov. 1 after three months as a psychiatric patient at Fort Roots Veterans Administration Hospital in North Little Rock, Ark.

Following the Robbins slaying, Police Commissioner Claude A. Armour cancelled all days off for the detective division and ordered it divided into three squads for round-the-clock investigation.

Police said an elderly white couple seen begging near the liquor store had been cleared.

Jewish Festival Of Lights Opens

NEW YORK AP -- Hanukkah, the eight - day Jewish "Festival of Lights," begins at sundown today.

The celebration marks the revolt led by Judah Maccabee against Syrian King Antiochus Epiphenes. After expelling the Syrians, the Jews rededicated the holy temple in Jerusalem.

At the temple, according to the Talmud only enough undefiled lamp oil was found for a single day's use during rededication ceremonies. But the lamp burned for eight days.

To commemorate the event, Jews now light one candle each night during the festival, until the eighth night, all the lights in the emorah or candleabrum, are ablaze.

$100 Fines For Drivers

NEW MADRID -- According to magistrate court records $100 fines were levied against intoxicated drivers by Judge Erie Wright Monday and Tuesday.

Charles Howard Babbitt paid $25 for excessive speed, Bobby Gene Mitchell paid $15 for permitting an unauthorized operator to drive a motor vehicle, Avery Henry Cookson paid $15 for following too closely, and William Edward Williams failed to yield right of way and paid $15.

J. C. Evans was fined $100, plus $20 costs, and given six months in jail on a charge of driving while intoxicated. He was released to go to Kentucky to get the money to pay the fine, leaving his car as security.

Since he has failed to return the court has ordered his car sold to satisfy the fine and costs.

Roy Wade was charged with careless and imprudent driving and for failure to have an operator's license. His total fines and costs were $50. James Young pleaded guilty to two charges; careless and reckless driving (drinking) and to improper registration. His total fines and costs amounted to $84, which he was unable to pay. He was held in the county jail.

Johnny Riley, Gary Miskell, and Ronnie Brooks were each charged with possession of intoxicating beer and were fined $50 each and sentenced to 30 days in jail but were released and given time to pay their fines.

Allen W. McCheney, fined $15 plus $20 costs for excessive speed, Walter Lee Williams Jr., paid a total of $50 and Floyd D. Matthews, $15 on similar charges.

Jerry Gray Shelton, charged with operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated was fined $100 and $20 costs.

Ozell West pleaded guilty to a charge of careless and reckless driving and was fined $25, plus $20 costs.

Jimmie Lon Taylor paid $100 fine plus costs for operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated.

Those paying smaller fines were Odell Wright Jr. $15 for following too close, Raymond Gamzles, $30 for driving on wrong side of road, Alfred Mitchell, $25 for careless and imprudent driving, and Marylin Rose Hulshoff, $15 for having no operator's license.

Elevated Train Mishap Kills One

CHICAGO (AP) - An elevated train ran off the rails during a rainstorm today and one of its eight cars plunged 30 feet to the ground, killing one person. Twenty-five persons were injured.

Another car was left hanging, one end attached to the train, the other resting on the ground.

The accident occurred near the Chicago Transit Authority station at 41st Street and Indiana Avenue on the South Side.

CTA officials said the cause of the crash had not been determined.

The train was carrying a light passenger load because during the morning rush hour the heavy travel on this CTA division runs from the South Side north toward the downtown business district.

Jones Announces Plans to Retire

Paul C. Jones, Kennett, Democratic representative for the 10th congressional district, announced Tuesday night that he will not be a candidate for the office he has held 18 years in the 1968 primary.

Jones made the announcement at a political meeting at the American Legion Hall.

About 200 Southeast Missouri Democratic leaders in the 16 county district attended the invitational banquet.

Jones said he had discussed the matter with his wife before deciding. He stated that he had been making more trips to the doctor's office in the past year and quipped that he is now 65 and has a medicare card.

"I don't want to be a part of a committee to pick my successor," Jones said.

Jones noted he could make a list of 25 persons in the room who he felt were qualified for the office. He did say he would oppose anyone who filed for the office, who he felt was not qualified.

The 10th district will encompass more territory in the next reapportionment, Jones continued. He suggested that the person, who runs, should have proved himself in a legislative or business way.

In connection with his remarks about the growth of the district and the job, Jones predicted that the persons, who campaign for the nomination in 1968 will spend at least a quarter of a million dollars. The one who wins, will probably have to spend $100,000 individually, he added.

Jones said he was not retiring from politics. He offered assistance and advice to whomever is elected. He started that he thought about retiring before the 1966 campaign but decided against it on the advice of many of his friends.

Gov. Warren E. Hearnes attended the banquet and paid tribute to Jones.

Hearnes stated that he felt he reflected the opinion of most of the persons in the district when he said he was proud to have been a constituent of Jones.

Hearnes also threw in a quip in regard to Jones' reminiscenes about his early career in the newspaper field. He said he knew he must have been a newsman when he heard him gripe about the affairs of Kennett.

Other state officials attending included Lt. Gov. Thomas Eagleton, Secretary of State James Kirkpatrick, and Attorney General Norman Anderson.

No States Meet All New Highway Safety Standards

WASHINGTON (AP) — No state now complies with all of the highway safety standards proposed by the federal government — and there are still more to come.

Degree of compliance with the first nine standards suggested for inclusion in state programs by the national highway safety agency varies widely.

Only three states, for example, require motorcyclists to wear crash helmets. But 20 states and the District of Columbia require periodic vehicle inspection.

The nine interim proposals were submitted to the states this week for discussion and study. Details are to be worked out later.

Dr. William Haddon Jr., agency administrator, said he hopes to send all proposed standards to the states by Feb. 28.

States must be implementing a safety program approved by the government by the end of 1968 or face possible loss of their highway safety funds and 10 per cent of their federal road building money.

There was little apparent criticism of the proposed highway safety standards during three meetings the agency held this week with state, county, local and other safety officials.

Drivers Hurt In Collision

A two-vehicle collision Tuesday at the intersection of highway 80 and route B, three miles west of East Prairie at 12:45 p.m., resulted in injury to both drivers.

Del D. Davis, 39, East Prairie, driving a 1964 Oldsmobile, came off route B and turned in front of a 1966 Ford pickup truck, driven by Theodore Miller, 70, Matthews.

Miller received a broken leg and arm, and Davis a concussion. Both were taken to the Missouri Delta Community hospital.

Davis was arrested for failure to yield right-of-way.

Tuesday at the west Mississippi river bridge approach, at 11:15 p.m. on highway 60, east of Charleston there was a three-truck collision.

A 1965 Ford truck, driven by George Marcus, 35, Humble, Tex., was towing a 1967 Ford pickup, when he lost control, causing the towed vehicle to turn sideways and strike a 1965 International truck, driven by Roy Shields, 29, Nevada.

Neither driver was hurt.

Auto Taxes Raised

CHARLESTON - Hunter Phillips, a member of the state commission, met Tuesday afternoon in the circuit court room to discuss equalization of the taxes in Mississippi county.

The meeting lasted for one hour and forty-five minutes. The commissioner set the increase on automobiles at 60 per cent.

Representing Mississippi county were County Judges, Bill Winchester, Lloyd Hall and Gilbert Bryant; Assessor Ed DeField, and Prosecuting Attorney Rod Ashby.

Phillips pointed out to a large audience and to the county court that the reason for the increase was to try to make uniform the assessed valuation all over Missouri. Although Mississippi county is lower than many counties there are other counties that also needed readjustment, he said.

Assessor DeField was told that all counties would use another valuation book next year after which the tax would be lowered between 15 and 20 per cent.

Many questions were raised. A tape recorder was used to record most of the session.

The Jaycees' holiday party will be Saturday at 9 p.m. at the Country Club. A go-go girl and band will entertain, it was announced at last night's meeting.

The dates for the home show were set for April 28-30.

Batman Write-in Vote Leaves Election Tied

GAINESVILLE, Ga. AP -- Batman, television's caped crusader, holds the balance of power in a City Commission race, all because some joker put his name on a write-in ballot.

Amazed officials counted the votes in an election Tuesday for a city commissioner three times and each time got the same result.

Candidates Howard James and Joseph Stargel each received 674 votes and there was one write-in vote for Batman. The votes were made official.

City Atty. William A. Guner said he will have to do some extensive research to find an answer to the problem. Gainesville has never had a tie election before and the city's election machinery makes no provision for a runoff.

Viet War Cost May Hit $10 Billion Above Budget

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — President Johnson estimates Viet Nam war costs between now and next June 30 will exceed earlier budget projections by $9 billion to $10 billion.

He plans to ask Congress next month for a supplemental appropriation to bridge the gap, he told a news conference Tuesday in his federal building office suite.

The President remained mum about the possibility of a 1967 tax increase, but said facts needed to make a decision are falling into place.

Although Johnson had predicted earlier that war outlays would top the budget figures by anywhere from $5 billion to $15 billion, the figures he cited at the news conference were perhaps a bit lower than many observers had expected.

Since the chief executive had long been citing the forthcoming Viet Nam money request as a major item to be pinned down before a tax decision, he was asked if the new estimate — as well as a recent federal forecast that business spending on plant expansion would slow down — would help him make such a decision.

"The answer is yes," Johnson replied. "It gives me help. If you are trying to find out if a decision has been made, it has not been."

Johnson went on to say, in response to another inquiry, that he would not speculate whether the new Viet Nam cost estimate plus results of the business investment survey would make a tax hike more or less likely.

"People might get the wrong impression," he asserted.

Dunklin Extension Director to India

COLUMBIA - Marvin Dobbs, Dunklin County extension director since 1955, has accepted a two-year assignment in India.

C.B. Ratchford, University of Missouri vice-president for extension, announced today that Dobbs has resigned his Dunklin County position effective Dec. 16.

Ratchford said Dobbs will join a University of Missouri team, which is helping to develop and strengthen teaching, research and extension programs of Orissa University of Agriculture and Technology at Bhubaneswar, India.

The team is assisting Indian University officials under a University of Missouri contract with the United States Agency for International Development.

Walt Wilkening, University of Missouri coordinator for the India-MU project, said that Dobbs will be extension training advisor at the university. He will be responsible for helping develop a program to train extension workers in the Indian state of Orissa.

The concept of extension as an off-campus education arm of a University is new in India.

University of Missouri staff members already in India are Wendell McKinsey, chief of party who is providing Orissa University officials with administrative and organizational assistance; C.R. Meeker, extension advisor; Marvin Parker, farm tools advisor; and Wesley Crenshaw, animal husbandry and veterinary science advisor.

Dobb will be accompanied by his wife and their two children. They expect to arrive in India Jan. 8.

Dobbs is a native of Rutledge, Ala. He was granted bachelor of science and master of science degrees from Auburn University in Alabama, and the doctor of philosophy degree from Louisiana State University in Baton Rouge. His major field of study was agricultural education.

Wednesday, December 7, 1193, Hjech, Thuringia: Prince Otto the Excitable decrees that Christmas will be moved back 18 days, because he can't wait any longer.

* * *

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

Because Christmas is a celebration of the birth of the Christ Child, it is especially a day for children. We bring you a poem dedicated to American's children - America's future.

Take a child to a high place
And show him the country.
Let him know the land
The shape of mountain and plain
The rivers and harbors are charted,
The states have been mapped and surveyed;
Township and city are bounded.
Roads are marked and houses numbered,
There are lights in the windows
From Nantucket to Monterey.
But the contours of freedom cannot be drawn for him;
For the boundaries of freedom are permissive.
Tell him the privileges exceed the prohibitions,
And both will test his measure as a man.
Tell him the stories of the two great births in history--
A child in Bethlehem; in Independence Hall... a nation--
And fuse these into common moral sentiment;
His birthright is of flag, as well as altar.
Show him the places of battles;
Name him the men whose swords were thoughts,
Define the republic by the responsibilities
As well as the rights it offers him.
The right to self-expression--
The freedom to worship, to study, to listen...
To make independent judgments --and to speak
The right to be a person--
The chance to grow, to develop and maintain
Individual dignity and worth...
The right to participate--
The opportunity for communion and assembly:
The privilege of public opinion
And free elections...
The right to choose and to change jobs,
To work with people or with things--
Or even not to work;
To employ men, or to employ learning or money...
The right to contract--
The wonder of a man's word becoming his bond...
The right to own property--
The title a man has to set his seal upon the land,
To furrow his own name into a field.
Or to plant a hill with the seeds of his own orchard;
His right to buy, and to build,
And to call a thing his own.....
The right to a heritage--
The right of one man to leave to another
Tangible and intangible fruits.
So that the personality of his labor and his learning
Will not be alienated or lost.
To receive from forebears and to leave to posterity
The uninjured meaning of words of tradition...
The right to belong--
Not as a child belongs to a parent,
But with knowledge and intent,
With the right born of responsible being,
As a man gives himself to faith,
To principle or to deeds of high cause...
Tell him these rights are his,
And the greatest is the most incidental,
For the right to belong
Is an off-shoot of belief
And a circumstance of loyalty--
And these are the essence of Allegiance.
Take a child to a high place
And show him the country.

Famed artist Milton Caniff whose "Steve Canyon" adventure strip appears regularly in The Daily Standard continues to amaze fellow-cartoonists with the extent of his personal participation in charities, benefits and philanthropic causes.

Most recent example of Caniff's willingness to give of his time and talent occurred this week at the Americana Hotel, New York, where he served as moderator at a morning discussion of "The New Era In Rehabilitation" featuring a distinguished panel of experts and sponsored by the Goodwill Industries of America, Inc. The session - first of its type to be held in New York City - heard Representative John E. Fogarty of Rhode Island, Harold Russell, Chairman of the President's Committee on Employment of the Handicapped, Dr. Frank H. Krusen, Director of Physical Medicine, Temple University Medical Center, and Dr. Harold E. Yuker, Professor of Psychology, Hofstra University. In additon to acting as moderator, Caniff took to a standing easel to interpret, in a series of unique sketches, just what the new look in rehabilitation is. Eugene Caldwell, of Cleveland, Ohio, President of Goodwill Industries, was host.

In additon to creating "Steve Canyon," Caniff also originated the cartoon character, "Good Willie," the happy wheelchair worker who has been the symbol of the Goodwill Industries for more than 15 years. The artist is a member of the Board of Directors of Goodwill and long has taken an interest in their service to handicapped people. Caniff's particular enthusiasm for their work stems from the fact that three close members of his family - an uncle, a grand-uncle, and an aunt - were amputees.

Because of his unstinting service to deserving causes, Caniff is undoubtedly the most-honored cartoonist in the business. Just a week before the Goodwill conference, Caniff was recipient of the 1966 "Service to Youth" Award presented by the Young Men's Christian Association of Greater New York at its annual dinner at the New York Hilton Hotel. In March of this year, the U.S. Air Force Association gave him its "Man of the Year" Award for distinguished and exceptional service, and in July he was made a Charter Member of the Executive Order of Ohio Commodores by the Governor of Ohio.

In 1947, Caniff won the Billy DeBeck Memorial Award of the National Cartoonists Society. In 1949 he won Sigma Delta Chi's Distinguished Service Award. Also in 1953, he received a Treasury Department citation for patriotic service in aiding the savings-bond program. In 1953, the Philadelphia Lodge of the B'nai Brith presented him with its "Americanism Award," In 1954, the Ohio Career Medal was given to him as "a distinguished son of Ohio." In 1956 he received the honorary Doctor of Fine Arts degree from Rollins College, Florida, adding it to the honorary Doctor of Laws degree he had received earlier from the Atlanta, Georgia, Law School.

In 1957, the State of Ohio gave him its Governor's Award as an outstanding native Ohioan. In 1959, the Press Club of Ohio presented him with its Distinguished Service Award. The Banshees Club of New York gave Caniff its Silver Lady Award as the "Cartoonist of the Year" in 1960. That same year, the Boy Scouts of America presented him with its "Silver Beaver" Award.

On September 15, 1964, during ceremonies marking "Steve Canyon Day" at the New York World's Fair, Caniff received the Aero-space Citation from the U.S. Air Force, the Golden Scroll of the National Cartoonists Society, and the World's Fair Silver Medallion of Honor.

In 1965 the New York Philanthropic League Award was bestowed on him as the "Man of the Year" in serving humanity.

Caniff is as conscientious in his work as he is generous in helping worthy organizations. As a result, he often works late into the night in his studio, turning out the exciting story-lines and flawless art that mark the "Steve Canyon" strip. Even with the help of Frank Engli, who does the lettering for the strip, and Richard Rockwell, his drawing assistant, Caniff personally still puts in from fourteen to sixteen hours a day at his drawing board.

WE NEED ASIAN HELP

Between Mao to the East and Kosygin to the West, screaming choice insults at America-charging us with the slaughter of women and children as well as the stock Communist indictment of aggression - we, the plain people, may be in some danger of losing our patience.

As the static from the blood-drenched peoples' paradises on either side of us grows more shrill, it becomes more difficult to reflect calmly on our unhappy experience in Southeast Asia and why Americans, in the uniform of the country, are dying there: to analyze our situation or to think constructively of a better course than our off-again, on-again aerial strafing of what we hope are the Viet Cong.

Thinking back, we are reminded that we went into Southeast Asia as advisors and to train these freedom fighters in the use of strange, new weapons. It was inevitable that, as the months dragged into years, there would be American casualties - and now, as they top the 300 mark, Americans are shooting back and piloting attacking planes.

Sentiment for a "negotiated settlement" appears to be running out of the Washington peace-makers' shoes as Democrats join Republicans in backing President Johnson's policy of seeing the job through. Most forthrightly, Louisiana's Senator Russell B. Long says we must be prepared to fight both Red China and Russia if necessary to win in South Vietnam. And now comes word that US Marines may be landed to close the border between the two Vietnams against further infiltration from the north.

But the issue is far from settled. And, if we are to see it through - as we must if we are ever to stand up to Communism anywhere - it is time to accept the help of the still-free nations of Asia. No less than 20 of them - from the free Republic of China on Taipei to Thailand and Korea to the Philippines - have offered. And we have been stiff-necked about letting Asians help in resolving a fundamentally Asian crisis. Chiang has pleaded for the chance of wiping out Red China's budding nuclear capability while there is yet time, and of invading the mainland whose teeming millions will flock to his support. Korea has offered up to 100,000 troops - and other Asian countries in proportion.

Let us stay on the job. But let us welcome the Asiatic help we must have.

GOVERNMENT NEEDS AID

We already have a Great Society, James S. Kemper, Jr., president of the companies of the Chicago-based Kemper Insurance Group, told chartered property and casualty underwriters at a meeting in Hamden, Conn.

"The people of the United States enjoy more material blessings than the people of any other country in the world, or of any other society in all recorded history," he said. "The concept of 'freedom from want' for all our people is at the threshold of realization."

Mr. Kemper went on to say that insurance leaders must make people understand the truth, which is that they are just as much interested as anyone else in providing for the poor, the stricken and the elderly; that in the great majority of cases the private insurance industry can do the job more economically and more efficiently than the Federal government; and that it can best do so under the present system of state regulation with a minimum of intervention and control at the Federal level.

When have we heard before those sentiments about a "minimum of intervention and control?" Just about every time a new Federal government program is suggested. And rightly so!!

Speaking of the Presidential pressure for a health insurance program for the elderly under social security, Mr. Kemper said: "It is an historical fact that once a country adopts a mild or modest or partial program for government health services financed by taxes rather than by premiums, public and political pressures inevitably expand the program to the point where it becomes an economic catastrophe."

To that we say, "Amen."

But this insurance industry leader appears unwilling to sit back and let someone else build the "Great Society." He offers help and direction.

He suggests formation of an Insurance Advisory Council to the President, which group would include insurance company chiefs, the Secretary of Commerce, and the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare.

Its purpose would be to consider all Federal legislation and other matters involving the relationship between the Government and the private insurance industry.

At least the Government would have the advice of experts on insurance and would learn at first hand what not to do.

Who knows - the Government might even learn that it would be unwise and unnecessary to put its hands in the policyholders' pockets. The Government might even learn that private enterprise can do the job better!!

TODAY'S HEALTH GUIDE

The old-time "doctor book", of the kind that used to be a mainstay in multitudes of homes, has generally outlived its usefulness. It may actually present dangers to health nowadays, for large numbers of time-honored remedies have been made obsolete by modern discoveries and innovations. It is a striking fact that 90 per cent of the drugs which physicians now prescribe were unknown 10 years ago. And advances in surgery are being made daily.

But there is a definite need for a home medical book which is based on the most up-to-date knowledge and experience. The American Medical Association has just produced such a book, under the title "Today's Health Guide". It is a massive work, lavishly illustrated, that runs to more than 600 fact-filled pages, all written in a manner which makes them both easily understandable and always interesting to the lay reader.

The Guide covers just about every conceivable subject that has to do with our health. The anatomy of the human body is depicted and explained. The safeguards that all should adopt, such as periodic health examinations, are detailed. The problems of mental and emotional health are dealt with. There is a chapter on safety--in the home, on the highways, on the job, on the farm, and so on. Other chapters deal with dangerous and disabling diseases, the proper use of drugs, modern surgery, and community health resources. There is a section on medical folklore--on the mistaken beliefs, some age-old, that in many instances can be a menace to health. And there is much more.

When illness or accident strikes, of course, no book can take the place of a doctor. But a work such as "Today's Health Guide" can be of great value in guarding and promoting good health. It has a place in every home in the land.

FEDERAL LAND OWNERSHIP

Land is the basic natural resource of the United States. Our nation embarked on the road to greatness through free land in vast quantity, coupled with freedom to develop its full potential under the personal enterprise system.

Today in our country there is no longer a wilderness frontier, an open range, or virgin land of value available for homesteading. But our land and its free use remain as important as ever. Our rapidly growing population and our expanding industry constantly demand more land. And land and the property located on it are a primary source of tax revenue to state and local governments.

In view of the enormous importance of land and its use, we have to be concerned by the fact that the Federal government now owns more than one-third of all the land in the United States; a total of 770 million acres. Thirty-nine Federal agencies are authorized to buy land.

Naturally, this land is purchased with the taxpayers' money. Once it is bought, no tax revenue to states and local communities come from the land, for their governments have no power to tax property belonging to the Federal government.

When the Federal government buys an acre of land, the taxpayer in the area where it is bought thus loses twice: first, in the Federal tax money used to buy the land; second, in higher state and local taxes he must pay because the Federal land is taken off the tax rolls. We are heading toward a monopoly of land ownership by the Federal government. HLH

WASHINGTON - It looks as if the automobile industry is going to stack the new advisory council on auto safety, to be established under the auto safety law recently passed by congress.

It hasn't reached the president's desk yet, but Secretary of Commerce John T. Connor has prepared a tentative list of "advisers" which bears out advance predictions that Connor, former General Motors director, would lean toward the motor moguls.

Conspicuously absent from the proposed advisory council is the name of Ralph Nader, the young man who sparked the entire auto safety investigation and who has done more to make highways safer than any other man in America.

On the tentative list of advisers, in contrast, are the following:

JOHN FLOBERG, General Counsel of Firestone Rubber, who during 1965 hearings before the Federal Trade Commission testified vigorously against any government safety standards for tires.

Despite FTC testimony showing there were 914 different kinds of tires, leaving the tire-buyer completely in the dark regarding tire safety, Floberg testified:

"I submit the best standards are the time-tested and proven standards and the applied free enterprise standards of quality . . . the discriminating taste of the American consumers."

CHRISTOPHER LANDMANN of Mercedes Benz, whose parent company, Daimler-Benz of Stuttgart, is represented by Gen. Julius Klein, close pal of Sen. Tom Dodd. The Mercedes-Benz factory at Coronel Suarez, Argentina, was where Eichmann, the Nazi slave-labor camp boss, was employed when kidnapped.

JOHN BUGAS, vice president of Ford, an able ex-FBI man who told the Senate Commerce Committee that safety judgement should be left to each of the 50 individual states; there should be no federal safety law. Later Bugas reversed himself, supported the Federal Auto safety law.

Everyone agrees that industry should be represented on the advisory council, but that it should not be stacked in favor of Detroit.

--WORK OF ONE LADY--

A unique conference has been taking place in Washington this week, organized by one lady. The lady is Mrs. Agnes Meyer, widow of the late chairman of the Washington Post, and the conference is to promote public schools. The meetings illustrate what one citizen can do to help the nation.

Mrs. Meyer, now almost 80, spent her early life as a teacher and welfare worker. She came to the conclusion that public schools were the backbone of America, that what built up a strong middle class in this country was the fact that every child was entitled to a free education.

Most Americans don't realize it, but few other western nations give their youth the same free public school education. Only the European communist countries have copied our system of free education.

But recently, with some southern politicians trying to tear down public schools, and pressure increasing in the north to use some public school funds for parochial schools, Mrs. Meyer organized the national committee for support of the public schools. It has wielded important influence.

Attending its sessions this week are educators and legislators from all over the nation, plus private citizens ranging from Gen. Omar Bradley to Author John Hersey, to ex-Gov. Terry Sanford of North Carolina, to George Gallup of the Gallup Poll, all contributing their time to helping make democracy live.

--MAKING DEMOCRACY LIVE--

Frederick Close, a man busy with the ramified problems of the aluminum corporation of America of which he is chairman, nevertheless takes time to head the crippled children's fund in Pittsburg, Pa.

He was talking the other night, at the Washington Big Brothers dinner, to John Duncan, the first Negro ever to serve as commissioner of the District of Columbia.

"Why have there been no racial disturbances in Pittsburg?" Commissioner Duncan asked Close.

"Because," the Alcoa executive replied, "a guy named Davy Lawrence got us all to working on this problem."

He referred to the late David Lawrence, longtime mayor of Pittsburg, later Governor of Pennsylvania, who enlisted the support of Alcoa, U.S. Steel, and other big businessmen to better the community.

"The Negro male has got to have the right to work," continued Close. "He has to have an opportunity to get a decent job. He wants to work, and if he's given an opportunity along with others he's not going to engage in racial disturbances. That's why Pittsburgh has been a model city. A guy named Davy Lawrence showed us the way."

The late David Lawrence, a Democrat, was the son of humble, Irish-Catholic parents. Frederick Close is a Republican and a Protestant. Their teamwork for their community is another illustration of what makes democracy live.

LONDON (AP) - "Take us to a night spot where there won't be any Americans," said the visitor from the United States.

"That's right," said his wife, "Some place where we won't be falling all over Americans like we were in Paris, and Rome."

But, you and your husband are Americans.

"Of course we are, honey, but we see enough of them at home. When we're in London we want to see Britishers. You know, the swinging ones in their swinging places."

Told that in London it is very difficult to find a minus-American night spot, the husband replied with a resigned sigh: "If it's really like that, all right. But please, some place where there won't be too many."

Years ago someone said that there are few hatreds as intense as the hatred of one American tourist for another.

Generally, this is still true today.

Although Western Europe's night clubs were not specifically designed for the American tourist, many were certainly founded with the free-spending, big-tipping American visitor in mind.

Some notable exceptions are: Dolly's, Scotch of St. James, Blaise's, the Cromwellian, The In-Place, and re-opening soon, the Ad Lib.

Dolly's is big, packed, explosive, loud and very dark. So dark that you may find yourself sitting next to a member of the Rolling Stones and not even know it for. . .maybe a minute or two.

Here you find members of the new aristocracy, the disc jockeys, some pop musicians, photographers and racing drivers.

Blaise's is really crazy, man.

Here you can see a girl with a bare midriff dancing with a man wearing gloves. Gloves are in-things now. Blaise's even has a place for low-stake gambling.

The croupiers look like demure schoolgirls in their blouses and prim ties. Maybe they are, for strange things are happening in London 1966.

All these places have food, drink and music. They are clubs, and if you're not a member and British, there may be trouble getting in.

If you are an American, brandish your passport and you're as good as in. Understandably, there are membership fees.

The Ad Lib, which was originally situated next door to a church, is moving but its owner, John Kennedy, says that when its doors open in June, The Ad Lib's going to be so far out it's going to be in.

On its menu chicken in several forms is listed. A footnote reads: "served live if you prefer it but the feathers are hell on the tonsils, but very sexy with applesauce."

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Tough, Twice-Convicted Labor Leader Gets Record Union Gift of $126,000 For Personal Use.

WASHINGTON, D.C. - In some labor circles, when records aren't being stolen, they're being broken. For the annals, there is the awesome, heavily investigated case of Lawrence Callanan, the chunky, white-haired chief of St. Louis' Steamfitters' Local 562 who at 55 is the tough - an understatement - champ of all gift takers on this front.

This two-time loser, this ex-prison inmate, this man who served five years for robbery and five years for labor racketeering and extortion, has recently been given $126,688 by his fellow unionists.

This is more money than any other labor leaders, anywhere in the world, ever has received as a token of the alleged devotion of his fellow unionists.

Many in St. Louis are aghast. But Larry Callanan's fame - coming after a turbulent lifetime of brawls and shakedowns - has not wafted east or west of that gateway city. 'Tis a pity.

So, to give you a clearer picture of this protector of the proletariat, a quote from the judge is in order. These words might also give some prominent labor leaders, especially the Washington-based chiefs of the national union with which Callanan's Local 562 is affiliated, some understanding of the public's disgust with them.

"The evidence of merciless use and betrayal of people who labor for their livelihood, and were members of unions supposed to be represented by these defendants (Callanan and the others in the extortion case-VR) is shocking," said Judge George H. Moore, July 18, 1954.

If he had not heard the acts under oath, the judge added, "I would not have believed them."

Callanan soon was dispatched to Leavenworth to serve 12 years. But he was paroled in 1960. Back he went to the union which he had taken over during the big war when its former business agent, Edward H. Flynn, was off with the Seabees.

It took six years but in mid-October 1966 the muscled machine got him back into power officially. He was named business manger of the Local.

Everybody in St. Louis knew his record. Everybody in the steamfitters' national office knew his record. The government knows his record.

But apparently no force could stop this ex-convict from taking over a union so strategically placed in the construction field that it can halt scores of millions of dollars' worth of building whenever it feels aggrieved.

Now, after his arduous hiatus from office, during some of which he headed the gold-laden Voluntary Political Fund of Local 562, Callanan told his friends he suffered from a personal dollar drain.

So they started to collect $2 from permit men and $1 from regular local members for each day they worked. Soon the sum came to $126,688.

Part of it was used to pay Callanan's back taxes (or he would have had to pay it himself in installments up to 1974) and the leftover was made available to this champion of the working man. The morsel came to about $100,000.

This gold rush could be tax free. All that Callanan needs to prove to the Internal Revenue Service is that the rank and file gave him their dollars out of strict altruism, love, and generosity of their overworked souls.

It must be shown that there was no connection between the donors and the donee except friendship or charity. It must be shown that the givers expect nothing in return - not even better union contracts or jobs.

Otherwise Callanan may have to give the government as much as $80,000 to $90,000, say the experts.

So all is not gold that glitters. Also Callanan is being probed by the Justice Dept. through an investigatory grand jury now sitting in Gary, Ind. The Federals are interested in the switching of pension insurance from one firm to another and how this came about.

There is much more to Callanan - all the way from the Kefauver hearings through the criminal courts, shootings, brawls, terror - and the usual outcries of innocence and piety.

There are Callanans in a score of cities. Does no one really care?

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

Because Christmas is a celebration of the birth of the Christ Child, it is especially a day for children. We bring you a poem dedicated to American's children - America's future.

Take a child to a high place
And show him the country.
Let him know the land
The shape of mountain and plain
The rivers and harbors are charted,
The states have been mapped and surveyed;
Township and city are bounded.
Roads are marked and houses numbered,
There are lights in the windows
From Nantucket to Monterey.
But the contours of freedom cannot be drawn for him;
For the boundaries of freedom are permissive.
Tell him the privileges exceed the prohibitions,
And both will test his measure as a man.
Tell him the stories of the two great births in history--
A child in Bethlehem; in Independence Hall... a nation--
And fuse these into common moral sentiment;
His birthright is of flag, as well as altar.
Show him the places of battles;
Name him the men whose swords were thoughts,
Define the republic by the responsibilities
As well as the rights it offers him.
The right to self-expression--
The freedom to worship, to study, to listen...
To make independent judgments --and to speak
The right to be a person--
The chance to grow, to develop and maintain
Individual dignity and worth...
The right to participate--
The opportunity for communion and assembly:
The privilege of public opinion
And free elections...
The right to choose and to change jobs,
To work with people or with things--
Or even not to work;
To employ men, or to employ learning or money...
The right to contract--
The wonder of a man's word becoming his bond...
The right to own property--
The title a man has to set his seal upon the land,
To furrow his own name into a field.
Or to plant a hill with the seeds of his own orchard;
His right to buy, and to build,
And to call a thing his own.....
The right to a heritage--
The right of one man to leave to another
Tangible and intangible fruits.
So that the personality of his labor and his learning
Will not be alienated or lost.
To receive from forebears and to leave to posterity
The uninjured meaning of words of tradition...
The right to belong--
Not as a child belongs to a parent,
But with knowledge and intent,
With the right born of responsible being,
As a man gives himself to faith,
To principle or to deeds of high cause...
Tell him these rights are his,
And the greatest is the most incidental,
For the right to belong
Is an off-shoot of belief
And a circumstance of loyalty--
And these are the essence of Allegiance.
Take a child to a high place
And show him the country.

Famed artist Milton Caniff whose "Steve Canyon" adventure strip appears regularly in The Daily Standard continues to amaze fellow-cartoonists with the extent of his personal participation in charities, benefits and philanthropic causes.

Most recent example of Caniff's willingness to give of his time and talent occurred this week at the Americana Hotel, New York, where he served as moderator at a morning discussion of "The New Era In Rehabilitation" featuring a distinguished panel of experts and sponsored by the Goodwill Industries of America, Inc. The session - first of its type to be held in New York City - heard Representative John E. Fogarty of Rhode Island, Harold Russell, Chairman of the President's Committee on Employment of the Handicapped, Dr. Frank H. Krusen, Director of Physical Medicine, Temple University Medical Center, and Dr. Harold E. Yuker, Professor of Psychology, Hofstra University. In additon to acting as moderator, Caniff took to a standing easel to interpret, in a series of unique sketches, just what the new look in rehabilitation is. Eugene Caldwell, of Cleveland, Ohio, President of Goodwill Industries, was host.

In additon to creating "Steve Canyon," Caniff also originated the cartoon character, "Good Willie," the happy wheelchair worker who has been the symbol of the Goodwill Industries for more than 15 years. The artist is a member of the Board of Directors of Goodwill and long has taken an interest in their service to handicapped people. Caniff's particular enthusiasm for their work stems from the fact that three close members of his family - an uncle, a grand-uncle, and an aunt - were amputees.

Because of his unstinting service to deserving causes, Caniff is undoubtedly the most-honored cartoonist in the business. Just a week before the Goodwill conference, Caniff was recipient of the 1966 "Service to Youth" Award presented by the Young Men's Christian Association of Greater New York at its annual dinner at the New York Hilton Hotel. In March of this year, the U.S. Air Force Association gave him its "Man of the Year" Award for distinguished and exceptional service, and in July he was made a Charter Member of the Executive Order of Ohio Commodores by the Governor of Ohio.

In 1947, Caniff won the Billy DeBeck Memorial Award of the National Cartoonists Society. In 1949 he won Sigma Delta Chi's Distinguished Service Award. Also in 1953, he received a Treasury Department citation for patriotic service in aiding the savings-bond program. In 1953, the Philadelphia Lodge of the B'nai Brith presented him with its "Americanism Award," In 1954, the Ohio Career Medal was given to him as "a distinguished son of Ohio." In 1956 he received the honorary Doctor of Fine Arts degree from Rollins College, Florida, adding it to the honorary Doctor of Laws degree he had received earlier from the Atlanta, Georgia, Law School.

In 1957, the State of Ohio gave him its Governor's Award as an outstanding native Ohioan. In 1959, the Press Club of Ohio presented him with its Distinguished Service Award. The Banshees Club of New York gave Caniff its Silver Lady Award as the "Cartoonist of the Year" in 1960. That same year, the Boy Scouts of America presented him with its "Silver Beaver" Award.

On September 15, 1964, during ceremonies marking "Steve Canyon Day" at the New York World's Fair, Caniff received the Aero-space Citation from the U.S. Air Force, the Golden Scroll of the National Cartoonists Society, and the World's Fair Silver Medallion of Honor.

In 1965 the New York Philanthropic League Award was bestowed on him as the "Man of the Year" in serving humanity.

Caniff is as conscientious in his work as he is generous in helping worthy organizations. As a result, he often works late into the night in his studio, turning out the exciting story-lines and flawless art that mark the "Steve Canyon" strip. Even with the help of Frank Engli, who does the lettering for the strip, and Richard Rockwell, his drawing assistant, Caniff personally still puts in from fourteen to sixteen hours a day at his drawing board.

WE NEED ASIAN HELP

Between Mao to the East and Kosygin to the West, screaming choice insults at America-charging us with the slaughter of women and children as well as the stock Communist indictment of aggression - we, the plain people, may be in some danger of losing our patience.

As the static from the blood-drenched peoples' paradises on either side of us grows more shrill, it becomes more difficult to reflect calmly on our unhappy experience in Southeast Asia and why Americans, in the uniform of the country, are dying there; to analyze our situation or to think constructively of a better course than our off-again, on-again aerial strafing of what we hope are the Viet Cong.

Thinking back, we are reminded that we went into Southeast Asia as advisors and to train these freedom fighters in the use of strange, new weapons. It was inevitable that, as the months dragged into years, there would be American casualties - and now, as they top the 300 mark, Americans are shooting back and piloting attacking planes.

Sentiment for a "negotiated settlement" appears to be running out of the Washington peace-makers' shoes as Democrats join Republicans in backing President Johnson's policy of seeing the job through. Most forthrightly, Louisiana's Senator Russell B. Long says we must be prepared to fight both Red China and Russia if necessary to win in South Vietnam. And now comes word that US Marines may be landed to close the border between the two Vietnams against further infiltration from the north.

But the issue is far from settled. And, if we are to see it through - as we must if we are ever to stand up to Communism anywhere - it is time to accept the help of the still-free nations of Asia. No less than 20 of them - from the free Republic of China on Taipei to Thailand and Korea to the Philippines - have offered. And we have been stiff-necked about letting Asians help in resolving a fundamentally Asian crisis. Chiang has pleaded for the chance of wiping out Red China's budding nuclear capability while there is yet time, and of invading the mainland whose teeming millions will flock to his support. Korea has offered up to 100,000 troops - and other Asian countries in proportion.

Let us stay on the job. But let us welcome the Asiatic help we must have.

GOVERNMENT NEEDS AID

We already have a Great Society, James S. Kemper, Jr., president of the companies of the Chicago-based Kemper Insurance Group, told chartered property and casualty underwriters at a meeting in Hamden, Conn.

"The people of the United States enjoy more material blessings than the people of any other country in the world, or of any other society in all recorded history," he said. "The concept of 'freedom from want' for all our people is at the threshold of realization."

Mr. Kemper went on to say that insurance leaders must make people understand the truth, which is that they are just as much interested as anyone else in providing for the poor, the stricken and the elderly; that in the great majority of cases the private insurance industry can do the job more economically and more efficiently than the Federal government; and that it can best do so under the present system of state regulation with a minimum of intervention and control at the Federal level.

When have we heard before those sentiments about a "minimum of intervention and control?" Just about every time a new Federal government program is suggested. And rightly so!!

Speaking of the Presidential pressure for a health insurance program for the elderly under social security, Mr. Kemper said: "It is an historical fact that once a country adopts a mild or modest or partial program for government health services financed by taxes rather than by premiums, public and political pressures inevitably expand the program to the point where it becomes an economic catastrophe."

To that we say, "Amen."

But this insurance industry leader appears unwilling to sit back and let someone else build the "Great Society." He offers help and direction.

He suggests formation of an Insurance Advisory Council to the President, which group would include insurance company chiefs, the Secretary of Commerce, and the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare.

Its purpose would be to consider all Federal legislation and other matters involving the relationship between the Government and the private insurance industry.

A guy named Davy Lawrence showed us the way."

The late David Lawrence, a Democrat, was the son of humble, Irish-Catholic parents. Frederick Close is a Republican and a Protestant. Their teamwork for their community is another illustration of what makes democracy live.

At least the Government would have the advice of experts on insurance and would learn at first hand what not to do.

Who knows - the Government might even learn that it would be unwise and unnecessary to put its hands in the policyholders' pockets. The Government might even learn that private enterprise can do the job better!!

Have you seen some of these rock 'n' roll groups on television? These kids all look like beat-up Barbie Dolls with long flowing hair down to their ankles. In front, they have their hair pierced so they can see. And they all wear "Little Lord Jack-the-Ripper Spats" with pants so tight they have to swallow their wallets. Their main choice of musical instruments is an electric guitar -- which they make themselves in a muffler shop.

TODAY'S HEALTH GUIDE

The old-time "doctor book", of the kind that used to be a mainstay in multitudes of homes, has generally outlived its usefulness. It may actually present dangers to health nowadays, for large numbers of time-honored remedies have been made obsolete by modern discoveries and innovations. It is a striking fact that 90 per cent of the drugs which physicians now prescribe were unknown 10 years ago. And advances in surgery are being made daily.

But there is a definite need for a home medical book which is based on the most up-to-date knowledge and experience. The American Medical Association has just produced such a book, under the title "Today's Health Guide". It is a massive work, lavishly illustrated, that runs to more than 600 fact-filled pages, all written in a manner which makes them both easily understandable and always interesting to the lay reader.

The Guide covers just about every conceivable subject that has to do with our health. The anatomy of the human body is depicted and explained. The safeguards that all should adopt, such as periodic health examinations, are detailed. The problems of mental and emotional health are dealt with. There is a chapter on safety--in the home, on the highways, on the job, on the farm, and so on. Other chapters deal with dangerous and disabling diseases, the proper use of drugs, modern surgery, and community health resources. There is a section on medical folklore--on the mistaken beliefs, some age-old, that in many instances can be a menace to health. And there is much more.

When illness or accident strikes, of course, no book can take the place of a doctor. But a work such as "Today's Health Guide" can be of great value in guarding and promoting good health. It has a place in every home in the land.

DOLLAR SALE

MOST MOTHER-IN-LAW jokes, though perennially popular, are terribly unfunny; the only amusing one I can recollect is about the son-in-law who was given two ties for his birthday by his mother-in-law; when he appeared at her house wearing one of them, she greeted him with: "What's the matther? -- didn't you like the other one?"

H. L. Hunt Says

FEDERAL LAND OWNERSHIP

Land is the basic natural resource of the United States. Our nation embarked on the road to greatness through free land in vast quantity, coupled with freedom to develop its full potential under the personal enterprise system.

Today in our country there is no longer a wilderness frontier, an open range, or virgin land of value available for homesteading. But our land and its free use remain as important as ever. Our rapidly growing population and our expanding industry constantly demand more land. And land and the property located on it are a primary source of tax revenue to state and local governments.

In view of the enormous importance of land and its use, we have to be concerned by the fact that the Federal government now owns more than one-third of all the land in the United States; a total of 770 million acres. Thirty-nine Federal agencies are authorized to buy land.

Naturally, this land is purchased with the taxpayers' money. Once it is bought, no tax revenue to states and local communities come from the land, for their governments have no power to tax property belonging to the Federal government.

When the Federal government buys an acre of land, the taxpayer in the area where it is bought thus loses twice: first, in the Federal tax money used to buy the land; second, in higher state and local taxes he must pay because the Federal land is taken off the tax rolls. We are heading toward a monopoly of land ownership by the Federal government.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Tough, Twice-Convicted Labor Leader Gets Record Union Gift of $126,000 For Personal Use.

WASHINGTON, D.C. - In some labor circles, when records aren't being stolen, they're being broken. For the annals, there is the awesome, heavily investigated case of Lawrence Callanan, the chunky, white-haired chief of St. Louis' Steamfitters' Local 562 who at 55 is the tough - an understatement - champ of all gift takers on this front.

This two-time loser, this ex-prison inmate, this man who served five years for robbery and five years for labor racketeering and extortion, has recently been given $126,688 by his fellow unionists.

This is more money than any other labor leaders, anywhere in the world, ever has received as a token of the alleged devotion of his fellow unionists.

Many in St. Louis are aghast. But Larry Callanan's fame - coming after a turbulent lifetime of brawls and shakedowns - has not wafted east or west of that gateway city. 'Tis a pity.

So, to give you a clearer picture of this protector of the proletariat, a quote from the judge is in order. These words might also give some prominent labor leaders, especially the Washington-based chiefs of the national union with which Callanan's Local 562 is affiliated, some understanding of the public's disgust with them.

"The evidence of merciless use and betrayal of people who labor for their livelihood, and were members of unions supposed to be represented by these defendants (Callanan and the others in the extortion case-VR) is shocking," said Judge George H. Moore, July 18, 1954.

If he had not heard the acts under oath, the judge added, "I would not have believed them."

Callanan soon was dispatched to Leavenworth to serve 12 years. But he was paroled in 1960. Back he went to the union which he had taken over during the big war when its former business agent, Edward H. Flynn, was off with the Seabees.

It took six years but in mid-October 1966 the muscled machine got him back into power officially. He was named business manger of the Local.

Everybody in St. Louis knew his record. Everybody in the steamfitters' national office knew his record. The government knows his record.

But apparently no force could stop this ex-convict from taking over a union so strategically placed in the construction field that it can halt scores of millions of dollars' worth of building whenever it feels aggrieved.

Now, after his arduous hiatus from office, during some of which he headed the gold-laden Voluntary Political Fund of Local 562, Callanan told his friends he suffered from a personal dollar drain.

So they started to collect $2 from permit men and $1 from regular local members for each day they worked. Soon the sum came to $126,688.

Part of it was used to pay Callanan's back taxes (or he would have had to pay it himself in installments up to 1974) and the leftover was made available to this champion of the working man. The morsel came to about $100,000.

This gold rush could be tax free. All that Callanan needs to prove to the Internal Revenue Service is that the rank and file gave him their dollars out of strict altruism, love, and generosity of their overworked souls.

It must be shown that there was no connection between the donors and the donee except friendship or charity. It must be shown that the givers expect nothing in return - not even better union contracts or jobs.

Otherwise Callanan may have to give the government as much as $80,000 to $90,000, say the experts.

So all is not gold that glitters. Also Callanan is being probed by the Justice Dept. through an investigatory grand jury now sitting in Gary, Ind. The Federals are interested in the switching of pension insurance from one firm to another and how this came about.

There is much more to Callanan - all the way from the Kefauver hearings through the criminal courts, shootings, brawls, terror - and the usual outcries of innocence and piety.

There are Callanans in a score of cities. Does no one really care?

Miss Sandra Harrison Says Vows With Gary Swinger

HICKMAN, Tenn. -- Sunburst arrangements of white gladioli, glowing tapers in branched candelabra entwined with Southern smilax, and wedding bells suspended with satin roping above the baptistry formed the setting in the Church of Christ for the marriage of Miss Sandra Harrison and Gary Swinger Oct. 22, at 3 p.m.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. John W. Harrison of Union City, Tenn., and the late Mr. Harrison and the parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Harry Swinger of Benton, Mo.

B. F. Haynie, Jr., minister of the church, officiated as the couple recited their sacred vows in a double ring ceremony. The family pews along the white carpeted aisle were marked with white satin bows.

Nuptial music was provided by a tape recording of "Because," "I Love You Truly," "O Promise Me," "Liebestraum," and the wedding marches from "Lohengrin" and "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, John Billy Harrison of Union City, wore a floor-length gown of white peau de soie. The molded bodice was fashioned with a scoop neckline and long fitted sleeves ending in calla points over her wrists and secured with tiny covered buttons.

The natural waistline was accented with re-embroidered Alencon lace appliques, touched with seed pearls that continued from the neckline down the front of the slim skirt. A detachable train flowed gracefully into chapel length.

Her bouffant veil of imported illusion with hand rolled hem was attached to a scalloped lace crown encrusted with beads and crystals, which were repeated on the veiling. She wore matching slippers and tiny pearl earrings, a gift from the groom and carried a cascade arrangement of white pompons, tulle and ribbons centered with a white orchid.

Mrs. Charles Curlin of Cayce, Ky., sister of the bride, was matron of honor and junior bridesmaids were Debbie Curlin of Cayce, a niece of the bride, and Cindy Swinger of Benton, a sister of the groom. They wore identical street-length dresses of mauve maltese brocade with matching headpieces of seed pearl circlets with tulle.

They wore dyed-to-match slippers, white gloves and carried colonial bouquets of white pompons with matching satin streamers.

David Porter of Benton was best man and ushers were Danny Joe Ballinger of Springfield, Mo., and Charlie Terrett of Hickman.

A royal blue double knit A-line dress topped with matching jacket fastened with tiny bows was worn by Mrs. Harrison, mother of the bride. Her hat was in harmonizing shades of blue. She wore black accessories and a corsage of cymbidium orchids.

Mrs. Swinger, mother of the groom, chose a dress of sheer gold wool with elbow-length sleeves. Her hat was gold brocade and she wore brown accessories, a fur stole and a cymbidium orchid corsage.

A reception was given at the R.E.C.C. building at Hickman following the wedding with Mrs. John W. Harrison serving as hostess.

The bride's table was covered with a lace cloth over green and centered with a six-branched candelabra entwined with white pompons and greenery. The four-tiered wedding cake was topped with a miniature bridal couple and was placed opposite a punch bowl filled with green punch. Other crystal appointments held salted nuts and tiny green mints shaped like rose petals.

Serving were Miss Linda Webb of Union City and Diane Swinger of Benton, a sister of the groom. Miss Diane Garling of Union City presided at the guest register. A corsage of white pompons complemented each girl's attire.

For a wedding trip to Gatlinburg and other points of interest in the Smoky mountains, the bride wore a two piece double knit suit of fawn brown. The double breasted jacket was trimmed in burnt orange. Her accessories were brown and her corsage was the orchid from her bridal bouquet.

They now live in Hickman where the groom is project superintendent at the Carborundum Graphite Products plant.

Among out-of-town guests attending were Mr. and Mrs. Hess Porter, Mrs. Bertie Baldwin, Mr. and Mrs. Wade Miller, all of Benton, Mo., David L. Ranson, Danny Ranson, both of Cape Girardeau, Mo., Mr. and Mrs. Randal Breece of St. Peters, Mo., Mr. and Mrs. Joe Ballinger of Springfield, Mo., Mr. and Mrs. Gene Wilhite, Harold Hogue of Memphis, Miss Marv Smith and Rod Harty of Nashville.

On Oct. 21, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Swinger entertained at a rehearsal dinner honoring the bridal couple, their immediate families and members of the wedding party.

Setting for the dinner was the country kitchen, where the party room was decorated with white wedding bells and yellow streamers. Tables were white with arrangements of fall flowers in shades of yellow and gold and white candelabra held yellow tapers.

About 22 guests attended.

Orbiter Photos Areas Of Steep, Jagged Rocks

WASHINGTON (AP) — A forbidding sweep of jagged rocks trusting from barren wasteland against a backdrop of glowering mountains appears in the first close-up photographs of the moon crater Copernicus.

It is not a spot where America' astronauts, moon-bound by the end of this decade, would land by choice.

The strikingly clear pictures came from Lunar Orbiter 2, circling the planet on a scouting mission for that project. They were made Nov 23 as the spacecraft sped 28½ miles above the lunar surface and 150 miles south of the crater.

Stored aboard the Orbiter, they were transmitted to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's deep space network at Goldstone, Calif., on command last Monday when the moon, sun and receiving station were in favorable position.

The pictures show mountains rising 1,000 feet from the flat floor of the crater, at slopes up to 30 degrees. To the north they outline against the horizon the 3,000-foot - high Gay-Lussac promontory of the Carpathian Mountains.

One shot, from the Orbiter's telephoto lens, shows a ledge of bedrock in the center part of the mountain chain on the crater floor. The picture takes in a part of the crater 17 miles wide and 150 miles deep out to the mountains standing against the sky.

Another picture shows the floor of Copernicus in fine detail and encompasses keyhole-shaped crater Fauth, 13 miles wide and 4,500 feet deep, 33 miles south of Copernicus.

Copernicus, 60 miles across and two miles deep, is one of the most prominent lunar features as seen from earth, lying on the upper left quarter of the moon.

Scientists say it was formed by the impact of giant meteorite that flung up blocks of rock as it crashed into the moon's surface. The great angular blocks are pictured on the crater's rim.

Cuba Opens School for Guerrillas

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

Fidel Castro's Cuban Communists have just thrown a new scare into Latin-American governments, says a report from Chile, by announcing the establishment in Havana of a new university for guerrillas. Graduates, the report says, will be shipped around the continent and to Asia and Africa to forment "people's wars."

The project, however, has a look of desperation as far as Latin America is concerned. Communism and guerrilla warriors in general have been faring poorly there. Confusion generated by the world Communist split and increasing confidence of governments in dealing with the threat have contributed to the sagging fortunes of violence-minded revolutionaries in the Western Hemisphere.

For some time, there had been a letup in Castro's program of shipping trained guerrillas to other countries, probably because of Cuba's own vexing internal problems. Now there are reports that new batches of guerrillas are ready, some reportedly trained by instructors who have returned from North Viet Nam.

For the most part, there appears today to be a feeling in Latin America that the threat has subsided considerably.

Directly after Castro came to power in Cuba, guerrilla war was something new for Latin-American military and police to cope with. Since then they have learned much. The job of containing guerrillas is not so difficult as in the jungled Orient. Guerrillas in the Western Hemisphere often have to rely on urban violence and that, with a steady rise in city living standards, has tended to ease off in recent years.

Carlson Cites Growing World Hunger Needs

KANSAS CITY AP -- Food shortages have become a tremendous worldwide problem, says Sen. Frank Carlson, R-Kan.

The abundance of food in the heart of America's wheat country is a great contrast to hunger in many parts of the world, Carlson said Monday night at the annual meeting of the hard winter wheat quality advisory council.

He said statistics indicate that 80 per cent of the world's people will be living in hungry lands by the year 2000.

"We and the other affluent nations cannot exist for long as an island of abundance in a sea of despair," he said.

Carlson said America must help prevent mass starvation anywhere in the world; develop commercial markets for American agricultural products, and help emerging nations improve production so they can feed their own people.

The senator praised the work of Great Plains Wheat and Western Wheat Associates, both grower organizations, and the U. S. Agriculture Department for finding new markets.

Their efforts have made Japan a wheat - eating nation and our No. 1 commercial market for wheat, he said.

Quality of grain must be improved, Carlson said, and the federal grain marketing research laboratory to be built in Manhattan, Kan., will help maintain quality. The $3.3 million laboratory is expected to be ready for use in 1970.

The term "spot" cotton originally meant cotton actually on the spot at any market.

Armed Forces

CAMP PENDLETON, CALIF. (FHTNC) -- Marine Private Roger T. Butler, son of Mr. Arthur E. Butler of 522 Sikes, Sikeston, Mo., has completed four weeks of individual combat training at this Marine Corps Base.

During his more than 200 hours of training, he learned about weapons and combat techniques from combat veteran instructors. They taught him how to conduct combat patrols, detect and remove mines and booby traps and use the standard Marine Corps infantry weapons.

He will now receive at least four weeks of specialist training before being assigned to his first permanent unit. Marines going to combat units will get detailed training in the particular combat skill they are designated for. Those who are going into technical fields will receive their advanced training at one of a variety of technical schools throughout the country.

Hearnes Asks Industry to Take up Litterbug Fight

KANSAS CITY (AP) - Gov. Warren E. Hearnes Monday urged representatives of the carbonated beverage industry to help prevent littering of the highways and other public property.

Anti-littering laws and public information have been largely ineffective against littering he told the annual convention of the Missouri Bottlers of Carbonated Beverages Association.

"Readily, all I can do at this point is to urge your industry to plead with the canners and with those who use and distribute bottles and cans to help with this problem," he said.

"It is not enough to say again and again: 'We only provide the bottles and cans; we are not responsible for what people do with them.' The statement may be true, but the ever-present threat to your economic well-being and public image will remain."

He said legislation is being considered in other states that would make it mandatory for retailers and consumers to return empty cans and bottles.

A NEW MEDAL commemorates the 25th anniversary of the attack on Pearl Harbor and carries a likeness of the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Medal Recalls Pearl Harbor

ENGLEWOOD OHIO - Twenty-five years ago the attack of Pearl Harbor changed a conflict into a World War.

President Roosevelt addressed a joint session of congress and declared that Dec. 7 was "a date which will live in infamy". "Remember Pearl Harbor" became the battle cry of the nation. A quarter of a century has passed and Pearl Harbor is remembered as an important chapter of American history.

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the attack has been commemorated on a medal released by Presidential Art Medals, Inc., Englewood, Ohio. This medal is dedicated to those who served during this attack on Dec. 7, 1941.

The "Attack on Pearl Harbor" medal was designed and sculptured by Edward R. Grove of Drexel Hill, Pa. Grove is a former sculptor-engraver at the United States mint in Philadelphia. In creating this medal, the sculptor felt that an attitude of grim determination was called for in this likeness of President Roosevelt, tempered by a reflection of his unquenchable belief in our final victory, which he did not live to see. More than fifty camera studies, drawings, sculptures and paintings were studied in preparation for the portrait.

The reverse side of the medal captures a dramatic moment during the sneak attack on the morning of the "day of infamy". Seriously crippled in the early torpedo plane attacks and still burning from the later wave of dive bombing, the "West Virginia" has settled, listing, to the bottom of Ford island. Behind her the masts of her stricken sister ship, the "Tennessee", are silhouetted against the clouds of smoke from the shattered "Arizona". Small boats are on their way to rescue survivors from the burning vessels.

The "Pearl Harbor" medal is issued in 1-3/4 diameter and available in bronze and silver. This medal is part of a series commemorating the twenty-fifth anniversary of World War II. The series consists of 30 medals depicting important events and personalities of the war. The medals will be issued near the 25th Anniversary of each event.

Buildup Hints Bigger Things For Mrs. Mao

TOKYO (AP) - Mrs. Mao Tse-tung is being given such a big political buildup that it suggests she is destined for bigger things after Mao dies.

The New China News Agency reported that Mao's wife, Chiang Ching, gave her first major political address on Nov. 28 to 20,000 art and literary workers in Peking. Though Premier Chou En-lai and cultural purge chief Chen Po-ta also spoke, it was plain that she was the center of attention.

Her speech revealed that she has been involved in the politics of the cultural revolution only a few years, and that she had encountered setbacks and rebuffs from those engaged in the theater. The No. 1 Peking Opera Company - one of those which fought back - and several other top music and ballet groups have been taken over by the army, presumably at her insistence.

Chiang Ching was named cultural adviser to the army. She now has a foot in the army and the other in the party central committee. She is first deputy chairman of the party's nationwide cultural purge committee.

As army adviser, she will report directly to Defense Minister Lin Piao, Mao's chief prop and leader of the hard-line wing of the party. Should Mao die, his widow should prove a considerable ally for Lin in his struggle to retain power in Mao's name.

Forage Manuel Published

COLUMBIA, Mo. -- A manual, designed to help Missouri dairymen and cattlemen produce and more profitably use forages, has been released by the University of Missouri extension division and college of agriculture.

The foreword states, "Missouri has some 6 to 6½ million acres of open land not suited for growing crops, but well adapted to producing pasture. Another 5 to 6 million acres that could grow row crops on occasion, are best suited to some type of forage production -- pasture, hay, or silage.

"For both beef and dairy producers there is great potential for more profitable use of these lands.

"The right forage and livestock production system, proper fertility, the right hay and silage handling equipment, and good management can help you utilize this forage to the best advantage to increase your income.

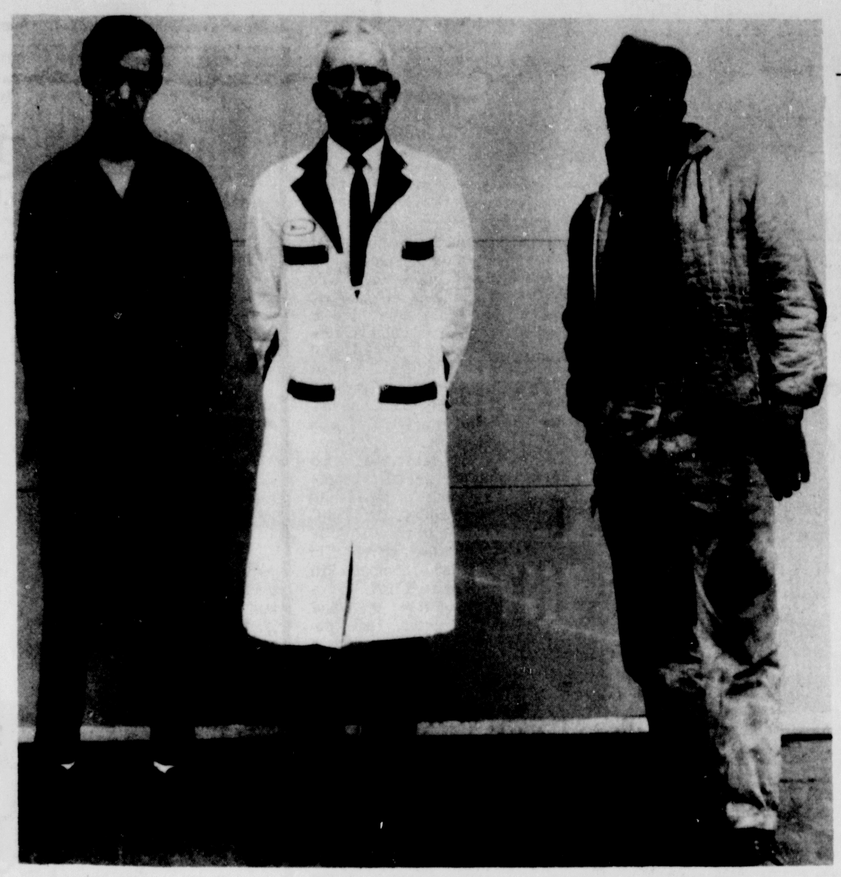
"This manual is designed to help you as a livestock producer and a professional agriculturist. It will answer questions on producing an adequate quality and quantity of forage, maintaining productive stands, economic considerations in fitting a forage program to the land, and proper combinations of forage and livestock."

A copy of the publication, Missouri Livestock Forage Manual for Beef and Dairy Cattle, can be obtained at county University extension centers. Centers are located in each county of the state.

The specialized knowledge of extension and resident staff members from the departments of field crops, agricultural economics, animal husbandry, agricultural engineering, soils, dairy husbandry, and entomology in the College of Agriculture went into the manual.

"The result is a well-rounded body of information on forage production and utilization in Missouri," said Schell H. Bodenhamer, associate dean for extension.

"In addition," said Bodenhamer, "different forage systems are explained. This feature of the manual will enable dairymen and cattlemen to develop the most profitable forage system for their particular enterprise."



TWO MEN completed 40 weeks training in automobile mechanics at the Manpower Development Training facility near the high school. From left are, Melvin E. Ruebe, Jr., Cape Girardeau, Lawrence Moore, instructor, and Cornell Cassell, Charleston.

Bodenhamer pointed out that "this is the most comprehensive, unified effort to adequately meet forage needs in Missouri ever to come out of the University. The forage manual represents several months of coordinated work by extension specialists and research personnel to come up with information that can make a substantial contribution to the agricultural economy of the state."

NEW DECORATIVE DEVICE

Miniature Christmas tree lights -- each bulb about one-quarter inch high -- are eye-catching decorations in green, red and blue colors. They are mostly used on small Christmas trees indoors, and Raymond Grenier, Christmas decoration buyer for F. W. Woolworth, says they are popular for small table trees in apartments and for table decoration in larger homes.

Common Market Entry Will Raise Britain Prices

LONDON (AP) — If Britain joins the European Common Market the changes in this island's life will be deep and subtle.

Food will cost more. Common Market farmers are guaranteed higher prices than Britain's state-subsidized farmers, and the cost is passed directly to the consumer. Britain will have to change its farm policy to conform. Beef will probably cost more, and so will butter. Most livestock prices may go up because of the higher cost of grain used for feed.

The government estimates this may boost the cost of food by 10 to 14 per cent, although the rise will be spread over several years. The price of imported fruit and vegetables probably will come down. The farmers' union warns the cost will be about $3 a week extra, or almost twice the government's estimate.

The entire British economic pie is expected to grow, and the breadwinner's slice of it should be larger. Greater industrial opportunities in a huge market now fenced off by a 12 percent tariff represent the major argument for going into the Common Market.

The big unknown is whether British firms can compete. Rising British sales in Europe already indicate they can. Of the 10 largest companies in Europe, four are British. They are ideally scaled to compete in the huge Common Market which already has 180 million consumers.

Britain would have to make a host of adjustments in tax and immigration policies. The Common Market's founding treaty provides for free movement of workers on equal terms. For women, the treaty means equal pay, long a sore point in Britain.

The average British worker will discover that he is not necessarily the best-paid or best-cared for in Europe. Fringe benefits - vacations, unemployment compensation, sick leave and pensions — are often better under other European governments.

Britain's prospective European partners may demand that the British pound end its role as a world currency. Devaluation could be one price of British entry. It is more certain that other Common Market countries will be protected from the fiscal shocks Britain absorbs to half the world.

Against this must be set another shock to the entire nation if Britain does not enter the Common Market. The British can then count on waking up one day and finding themselves an offshore island, still separated from a dynamic Europe by Channel fog.

WORLD, TEACH MY SON

World, please take my son in hand and teach him the things he will have to know. Teach him. . . .but gently, if you can.

Teach him that for every enemy there is a friend. Let him learn early that the bullies are the easiest people to lick.

Teach him that for every scoundrel, there is a hero-that for every politician there is a dedicated leader.

Teach him the wonder of books. Give him quiet time to ponder the eternal mystery of birds in the sky, bees in the sun, and flowers on a green hill.

Teach him that it is far more honorable to fail than to cheat.

Teach him to have faith in his own ideas, even if everyone tells him they're wrong.

Give my son the strength not to follow the crowd when everyone else is getting on the bandwagon.

Teach him to listen to all men--but to filter all he hears on a screen of truth and to take only the good that comes through.

Teach him to sell his brawn and brains to the highest bidders, but never to put a price tag on his heart and soul.

Teach him to close his ears on a howling mob--and to fight if he thinks he's right.

Teach him gently, world, but don't coddle him because only the test of fire makes fine steel.

New Book Tells Saga of James Boys

COLUMBIA, Dec. -- The saga of the James boys, Missouri's notorious outlaws of the post-Civil War era, is told by Willaim A. Settle, Jr., a professional historian, in "Jesse James Was His Name," published by the University of Missouri Press,

Dr. Settle discusses fact and fiction surrounding the Jameses in such a manner that the reader may end in his own mind the question whether Jesse and Frank were common criminals or gallant Robin Hoods.

That point has been in debate ever since the outlaws all but pioneered methods of operation in robbing trains and banks in the unsettled period following the Civil War. Their proponents, mostly Democrats who claimed that Radical and Republican administrations prevented Confederates from resuming normal life in the state after the war, pictured them as gallants who helped the poor with funds obtained from the none-too-popular banks and railroads. Their opponents, that included the Pinkertons, railrods, the northern and eastern press, took a different view of the matter.

Naturally the exploits of the Jameses became of political concern during the period. Their 16-year career of banditry, in which Jesse James went uncaptured and Frank James unconvicted after voluntarily surrendering, didn't contribute heavily to the budding political career of Gov. Thomas T. Crittenden, under whose administration the outlawry of the James and the famed Younger brothers came to an abrupt halt.

Dr. Settle's book tells how the cold-eyed bandits who gunned down unarmed men and terrorized the countryside became heroes and their exploits became the stuff of legend.

Certainly they became Missouri's most publicized men of the time, the subject of hundreds of dime novels, hard-backed books, of songs now known as folklore, and subsequently of movies and television.

"Although there have been a few attempts to destroy the Robin Hood aspects of the James legend, it is apparent that it is too well rooted in American folklore to suffer serious damage," Dr. Settle writes. The forces that sustain it are far greater than any that would destroy it."

Much basic to the Robin Hood tradition is the hero's robbing the rich to give to the poor, he said.

"In all the voluminous material that pertains to Jesse James and the James band, evidence of specific acts of generosity toward the poor, even with funds stolen from the vaults of banks and safes of express cars, is practically nonexistent; yet the impression that Jesse James robbed the rich and gave to the poor lives on.

"The legend's historical roots are easier to determine than those of the legends of many medieval outlaws; it is well established that the latter grew out of and were sustained by the injustices of a social system.

"People, frustrated in life's struggle and bored by its routine, will probably always be able to identify their situation with Jesse's and find satisfaction in his exploits, just as many of his contemporaries saw him as the unvanquished hero of the South's struggle against a tyrannical government."

Dr. Settle describes in detail some of the famed holdups allegedly staged by the Jameses and the Youngers, and casts doubt on some of the other exploits for which they were blamed.

Dr. Settle, professor of history at the University of Tulsa (Okla.) spent more than a quarter of a century trailing the James brothers through columns of old newspapers, records of courts and other sources to provide background for the book.

He critically examined contemporary accounts of their activities and interviewed men and women who could give eyewitness or close hearsay evidence of them. The application of techniques of scholarly research helped winnow fact from fiction in producing the 263-page book on the most notorious American bandits.

Dr. Settle holds degrees from Southeast Missouri State college at Cape Girardeau and the University of Missouri. He has been chairman of the department of history and political science at Tulsa U. since 1946.

Release date for his book was Tuesday by the University Press. The book is available through bookstores or from the University of Missouri Press at $6 a copy.

Six Injured In Collision

CAIRO -- A Cairo youth is listed in critical condition at St. Francis hospital in Cape Girardeau Monday following an early morning traffic accident about 2-1/2 miles west of Cape Girardeau, on highway 74.

Russell (Rusty) H. Meadows, 19, suffered fractures to the left leg and right ankle, multiple face cuts and a concussion and has been placed in the intensive - care room of the hospital.

Three other persons riding in the second car, were also admitted to the intensive-care room, and two were admitted to the hospital.

Robert Herrell, 39, and Leon DeBrach, 24, both of Lutesville, were treated and released.

All seven persons in a car, which was driven by Hershell Hinkebein, 37, of Leopold, were employes of the Florsheim Shoe Co. in Cape Girardeau and were enroute to work.

Meadows, who works for the Corp of Engineers, was enroute to work at Advance, Mo.

Other passengers in the Hinkebein auto were Delmar Wibker 38, and Clarence Stause, 34, both of Leopold, and Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Snider, both of Advance.

The accident occurred on a straight stretch of highway near the crest of a small incline.

Missouri State Patrolman Charles Whitehead said he was unable to determine exactly how the accident happened.

"It was a head - on crash, with the left fender of both vehicles colliding," said Trooper Charles Whitehead. "The road was slippery. Both cars were demolished."

Lead Poisoning Danger Exists For Children

JEFFERSON CITY -- To many television buffs, "lead poisoning" suggests the malady suffered by the numerous victims of gun play on popular western and secret agent programs -- an entertaining and relatively harmless condition.

To the Missouri division of health, however, lead poisoning represents a serious health hazard, and this is especially true among young children, who seem to be its most frequent victims.

Dr. L. M. Garner, acting director of the division of health, attributes the majority of lead poisoning cases in Missouri to children's unknowningly eating lead or materials containing lead in their natural desire to put things into their mouths. As possible sources of danger the Doctor suggested lead-containing paints and face powders, toys and novelties, colored crayons and chalks, and field - grown vegetables and fruits improperly cleaned by certain insecticides. Other cases result from drinking water transmitted through lead pipes, and inhaling fumes from the burning of items which contain lead, such as batteries.

"By far the most frequent cause is from eating paint," Dr. Garner said. He explained that many children have the habit of chewing on painted surfaces. If the paint chips they swallow as a result of this activity contain lead, as a lot of paints do, lead poisoning can occur.

Lead tends to build up in the body, and as it increases, becomes poisonous and produces symptoms ranging from a mild weakness with vomiting and loss of appetite to brain damage and death.

Dr. Garner recommended that only paints without lead be used for home interiors and furniture, because the home offers the child the greatest access to painted surfaces. Most paint cans carry a statement of lead content. When there is doubt, do not use the paint, the Doctor cautioned. Similar statements, he said, are to be found on toys, furniture and other items designed for children's use and should be considered when making a purchase. If there are doubts about previously painted furniture, walls or woodwork, try to remove the paint and recover with non-lead paint, he said.

Dr. Garner urged parents with young children to be on the lookout for possible sources of lead poisoning and to eliminate them without delay. "If you suspect that a child has been exposed to any quantity of lead, regardless of the course, take him to a doctor or to your local health department office immediately," the state health director concluded.

Hike in Soybean Price Supports Called Unneeded

DES MOINES, Iowa AP -- American Soybean Association leaders declared Monday that no increase in government price supports is needed to meet rising demands for soybeans.

A spokesman said its directors have adopted a resolution urging the Agriculture Department to retain the present price support level of $2.50 a bushel for the 1967 crop. Some farm organizations have asked that the price be raised to 12.75.

Newspapers to Offer Work for MU Students

COLUMBIA -- The University of Missouri School of Journalism and the Missouri Press Association have again arranged a summer internship program with cooperating Missouri newspapers, Dr. Earl F. English, dean of the school, has announced.

The "75/2 Plan" provides for 10 weeks of summer employment for journalism students on either weekly or small daily newspapers. The student receives $75 per week and two honors of journalism credit for the period, his grade based on evaluation of his work by his employer.

Plans are being made for a similar arrangement with some of the state's radio stations.

Inquiries should be addressed to the Journalism Placement Office, 102 Neff Hall.

GI Camp Followers Doing Big Business

By JOHN NANCE

DAU TIENG, South Viet Nam (AP) — There's an army in Viet Nam that never makes the lists of statistics, the tables of organization or the battle reports — but it's everywhere.

It's able-bodied and sometimes even hard-working despite notable tendencies for gamboling instead of gunslinging and giggles instead of "gung-ho."

It's the army of camp followers — mostly children and women — that has made big business of going where the American GI's go.

A recent bonanza was at Dau Tieng, northwest of Saigon on the edge of the big Michelin rubber plantation where the U.S. 1st Infantry Division made its forward headquarters for Operation Attleboro.

From sunup to sundown, ragamuffin youngsters from nearby villages scampered among the tents and rubber trees to scrounge whatever they could. While they cadged cigarettes, C rations and old tin cans — nobody seemed to know exactly what the cans were for — their older sisters and mothers went to work.

Laundries were established behind houses and each morning the women collected the mud-caked fatigue uniforms of the GI's. Next day they were returned, clean, pressed and folded. Cost: 50 piasters a set — about 42 cents.

Soldiers on KP duty in mess halls were able to hire stand-ins from the legions that appeared at dawn. For a dollar a day, the GI's could stand by while their replacements did the kitchen dirty work.

Other squads of women toured the grounds, picking up cigarette butts, scraps of paper and odd refuse to beautify the premises.

Outdoor barbershops offering haircut, shave and facial massage were set up in the shade of the plantation.

Some entrepreneurs got into the big money luxury items such as ice, beer and soda pop.

On one particularly hot day, the cost of a 25-pound cake of ice was up to 400 piasters — better than $3.50 — by midmorning and was soaring with the temperature.

As the prices for goods and services increased, so did the ranks of the army. At one point it was noted that some Vietnamese soldiers from a nearby encampment were spending more time peddling beer and ice than they were on duty.

Goods seldom seen in Dau Tieng began to show up. A supply of American whisky and European cognac apparently imported from Saigon, was being hawked by barefoot urchins at 1,000 piasters a bottle — $8.75.

There was even military training for some of the hardy ones. A group of GI's preparing guard posts hired youngsters to fill sandbags and construct bunkers.

William A. Settle

New Book Tells Saga of James Boys

COLUMBIA, Dec. -- The saga of the James boys, Missouri's notorious outlaws of the post-Civil War era, is told by William A. Settle, Jr., a professional historian, in "Jesse James Was His Name," published by the University of Missouri Press,

Dr. Settle discusses fact and fiction surrounding the Jameses in such a manner that the reader may end in his own mind the question whether Jesse and Frank were common criminals or gallant Robin Hoods.

That point has been in debate ever since the outlaws all but pioneered methods of operation in robbing trains and banks in the unsettled period following the Civil War. Their proponents, mostly Democrats who claimed that Radical and Republican administrations prevented Confederates from resuming normal life in the state after the war, pictured them as gallants who helped the poor with funds obtained from the none-too-popular banks and railroads. Their opponents, that included the Pinkertons, railrods, the northern and eastern press, took a different view of the matter.

Naturally the exploits of the Jameses became of political concern during the period. Their 16-year career of banditry, in which Jesse James went uncaptured and Frank James unconvicted after voluntarily surrendering, didn't contribute heavily to the budding political career of Gov. Thomas T. Crittenden, under whose administration the outlawry of the James and the famed Younger brothers came to an abrupt halt.

Dr. Settle's book tells how the cold-eyed bandits who gunned down unarmed men and terrorized the countryside became heroes and their exploits became the stuff of legend.

Certainly they became Missouri's most publicized men of the time, the subject of hundreds of dime novels, hard-backed books, of songs now known as folklore, and subsequently of movies and television.

"Although there have been a few attempts to destroy the Robin Hood aspects of the James legend, it is apparent that it is too well rooted in American folklore to suffer serious damage," Dr. Settle writes. The forces that sustain it are far greater than any that would destroy it."

Much basic to the Robin Hood tradition is the hero's robbing the rich to give to the poor, he said.

"In all the voluminous material that pertains to Jesse James and the James band, evidence of specific acts of generosity toward the poor, even with funds stolen from the vaults of banks and safes of express cars, is practically nonexistent; yet the impression that Jesse James robbed the rich and gave to the poor lives on.

"The legend's historical roots are easier to determine than those of the legends of many medieval outlaws; it is well established that the latter grew out of and were sustained by the injustices of a social system.

"People, frustrated in life's struggle and bored by its routine, will probably always be able to identify their situation with Jesse's and find satisfaction in his exploits, just as many of his contemporaries saw him as the unvanquished hero of the South's struggle against a tyrannical government."

Dr. Settle describes in detail some of the famed holdups allegedly staged by the Jameses and the Youngers, and casts doubt on some of the other exploits for which they were blamed.

Dr. Settle, professor of history at the University of Tulsa (Okla.) spent more than a quarter of a century trailing the James brothers through columns of old newspapers, records of courts and other sources to provide background for the book.

He critically examined contemporary accounts of their activities and interviewed men and women who could give eye-witness or close hearsay evidence of them. The application of techniques of scholarly research helped winnow fact from fiction in producing the 263-page book on the most notorious American bandits.

Dr. Settle holds degrees from Southeast Missouri State college at Cape Girardeau and the University of Missouri. He has been chairman of the department of history and political science at Tulsa U. since 1946.

Release date for his book was Tuesday by the University Press. The book is available through bookstores or from the University of Missouri Press at $6 a copy.

Six Injured In Collision

CAIRO -- A Cairo youth is listed in critical condition at St. Francis hospital in Cape Girardeau Monday following an early morning traffic accident about 2-1/2 miles west of Cape Girardeau, on highway 74.

Russell (Rusty) H. Meadows, 19, suffered fractures to the left leg and right ankle, multiple face cuts and a concussion and has been placed in the intensive - care room of the hospital.

Three other persons riding in the second car, were also admitted to the intensive-care room, and two were admitted to the hospital.

Robert Herrell, 39, and Leon DeBrach, 24, both of Lutesville, were treated and released.

All seven persons in a car, which was driven by Hershell Hinkebein, 37, of Leopold, were employes of the Florsheim Shoe Co. in Cape Girardeau and were enroute to work.

Meadows, who works for the Corp of Engineers, was enroute to work at Advance, Mo.

Other passengers in the Hinkebein auto were Delmar Wibker 38, and Clarence Stause, 34, both of Leopold, and Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Snider, both of Advance.

The accident occurred on a straight stretch of highway near the crest of a small incline.

Missouri State Patrolman Charles Whitehead said he was unable to determine exactly how the accident happened.

"It was a head - on crash, with the left fender of both vehicles colliding," said Trooper Charles Whitehead. "The road was slippery. Both cars were demolished."

Lead Poisoning Danger Exists For Children

JEFFERSON CITY -- To many television buffs, "lead poisoning" suggests the malady suffered by the numerous victims of gun play on popular western and secret agent programs -- an entertaining and relatively harmless condition.

To the Missouri division of health, however, lead poisoning represents a serious health hazard, and this is especially true among young children, who seem to be its most frequent victims.

Dr. L. M. Garner, acting director of the division of health, attributes the majority of lead poisoning cases in Missouri to children's unknowningly eating lead or materials containing lead in their natural desire to put things into their mouths. As possible sources of danger the Doctor suggested lead-containing paints and face powders, toys and novelties, colored crayons and chalks, and field - grown vegetables and fruits improperly cleaned by certain insecticides. Other cases result from drinking water transmitted through lead pipes, and inhaling fumes from the burning of items which contain lead, such as batteries.

"By far the most frequent cause is from eating paint," Dr. Garner said. He explained that many children have the habit of chewing on painted surfaces. If the paint chips they swallow as a result of this activity contain lead, as a lot of paints do, lead poisoning can occur.

Lead tends to build up in the body, and as it increases, becomes poisonous and produces symptoms ranging from a mild weakness with vomiting and loss of appetite to brain damage and death.

Dr. Garner recommended that only paints without lead be used for home interiors and furniture, because the home offers the child the greatest access to painted surfaces. Most paint cans carry a statement of lead content. When there is doubt, do not use the paint, the Doctor cautioned. Similar statements, he said, are to be found on toys, furniture and other items designed for children's use and should be considered when making a purchase. If there are doubts about previously painted furniture, walls or woodwork, try to remove the paint and recover with non-lead paint, he said.

Dr. Garner urged parents with young children to be on the lookout for possible sources of lead poisoning and to eliminate them without delay. "If you suspect that a child has been exposed to any quantity of lead, regardless of the course, take him to a doctor or to your local health department office immediately," the state health director concluded.

Hike in Soybean Price Supports Called Unneeded

DES MOINES, Iowa AP -- American Soybean Association leaders declared Monday that no increase in government price supports is needed to meet rising demands for soybeans.

A spokesman said its directors have adopted a resolution urging the Agriculture Department to retain the present price support level of $2.50 a bushel for the 1967 crop. Some farm organizations have asked that the price be raised to 12.75.

Newspapers to Offer Work for MU Students

COLUMBIA -- The University of Missouri School of Journalism and the Missouri Press Association have again arranged a summer internship program with cooperating Missouri newspapers, Dr. Earl F. English, dean of the school, has announced.

The "75/2 Plan" provides for 10 weeks of summer employment for journalism students on either weekly or small daily newspapers. The student receives $75 per week and two honors of journalism credit for the period, his grade based on evaluation of his work by his employer.

Plans are being made for a similar arrangement with some of the state's radio stations.

Inquiries should be addressed to the Journalism Placement Office, 102 Neff Hall.

GI Camp Followers Doing Big Business

By JOHN NANCE

DAU TIENG, South Viet Nam (AP) — There's an army in Viet Nam that never makes the lists of statistics, the tables of organization or the battle reports — but it's everywhere.

It's able-bodied and sometimes even hard-working despite notable tendencies for gamboling instead of gunslinging and giggles instead of "gung-ho."

It's the army of camp followers — mostly children and women — that has made big business of going where the American GI's go.

A recent bonanza was at Dau Tieng, northwest of Saigon on the edge of the big Michelin rubber plantation where the U.S. 1st Infantry Division made its forward headquarters for Operation Attleboro.

From sunup to sundown, ragamuffin youngsters from nearby villages scampered among the tents and rubber trees to scrounge whatever they could. While they cadged cigarettes, C rations and old tin cans — nobody seemed to know exactly what the cans were for — their older sisters and mothers went to work.

Laundries were established behind houses and each morning the women collected the mud-caked fatigue uniforms of the GI's. Next day they were returned, clean, pressed and folded. Cost: 50 piasters a set — about 42 cents.

Soldiers on KP duty in mess halls were able to hire stand-ins from the legions that appeared at dawn. For a dollar a day, the GI's could stand by while their replacements did the kitchen dirty work.

Other squads of women toured the grounds, picking up cigarette butts, scraps of paper and odd refuse to beautify the premises.

Outdoor barbershops offering haircut, shave and facial massage were set up in the shade of the plantation.

Some entrepreneurs got into the big money luxury items such as ice, beer and soda pop.

On one particularly hot day, the cost of a 25-pound cake of ice was up to 400 piasters — better than $3.50 — by midmorning and was soaring with the temperature.

As the prices for goods and services increased, so did the ranks of the army. At one point it was noted that some Vietnamese soldiers from a nearby encampment were spending more time peddling beer and ice than they were on duty.

Goods seldom seen in Dau Tieng began to show up. A supply of American whisky and European cognac apparently imported from Saigon, was being hawked by barefoot urchins at 1,000 piasters a bottle — $8.75.

There was even military training for some of the hardy ones. A group of GI's preparing guard posts hired youngsters to fill sandbags and construct bunkers.

THIS HARMLESS LOOKING brown spider packs enough venom to kill a human being.

Deadly Spider Hides In Stored Clothing

COLUMBIA, -- It is now nine years since Missouri scientists first exposed the harmless-looking brown spider as a poisonous culprit capable of causing death. What has been learned of the habits and dangers of this tiny villain in the meantime?

Eight deaths have been reported as the result of bites from this venomous arachnid that can stand on a quarter without hanging over the edges too far. There may have been earlier deaths from the same cause, but until the Missouri detection the brown spider had escaped serious suspicion.

The venom of the brown spider is said to be ten times as powerful as that of the rattlesnake, although the snake injects 25 to 50 times more poison when it attacks.

It is known that the brown spider lives in the southern half of the United States. it has been found no father north than Kansas and Illinois, but as far east as Atlanta. Hidden in a suitcase, the brown spider is known to have gone as far west as Southern California.

Large doses of cortisteroids have proved generally effective in the treatment of bites, as announced after tests by a team of scientists at the University of Arkansas in 1964.

A team of scientists in Kansas is investigating the treatment of bite victims and is expected to have an announcement soon.

The brown spider -- which bears the scientific name of Loxasceles reclusa -- continues to be in the news. Only recently, at the annual M. D. Day at the University of Missouri School of Medicine, Dr. Norman D. Asel, professor of dermatology at the medical school, spoke on "The Treatment of Brown Spider Bites." Dr. Asel said a dozen or more bite victims have been treated at the Medical Center in recent years. In connection with the M. D. Day program was a photographic display arranged by Dr. Curtis W. Wingo, professor of entomology at the University, who exhibited pictures of the brown spider in various post-embryonic stages. He had a hand in revealing the true nature of the brown spider, and has a large collection of the species.

The brown spider, easily identified by the black violin-shaped area extending from head toward thorax, was found by the Missouri investigators to be a close relative of a poisonous brown spider in South America which had been known for some years. Until 1957, it was presumed that the infamous black widow was the only deadly spider in the United States.

The North American version might have continued in its cloak of anonymity and deceptive innocence had it not been for the suspicions of the late Dr. James A. Atkins, formerly a practicing physician in Columbia who was also a part-time teacher of pathology at the University's School of Medicine. Late in 1954 he related his suspicions to colleagues, and three members of the faculty joined him in research. They were Dr. Wingo; Dr. William A. Sodeman, at that time chairman of the department of medicine and now dean of the Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia; and the late Dr. Joseph E. Flynn, who was chairman of pathology.

Their findings cast the long-ignored brown spider in a new light, that of a definite menace suddenly exposed to widespread scrutiny.

A long siege of pain and suffering awaits the bite victim who neglects prompt treatment. Dr. Asel, in his recent talk, traced the deteriorating stages of the unattended bite wound. The initial symptom produced by the bite is a stinging or burning sensation, which some persons may not take seriously at first. Pain begins in one or two hours and progresses for the next 12 to 15 hours. A tiny blister forms at the site of the bite, around which a zone of redness widens. This zone becomes firm after 24 to 48 hours. Usually, 36 hours after the bite the individual will experience pain in the joints, nausea and vomiting. In some cases, severe systemic reactions may occur with temperatures rising to 105 degrees. Destruction of red blood cells (hemolysis) and severe anemia may occur and complicated kidney problems may appear. Within one or two weeks a gangrenous condition develops in the area of the bite, and dead tissue will slough, requiring weeks to heal.

THIS HARMLESS LOOKING brown spider packs enough venom to kill a human being.

Deadly Spider Hides In Stored Clothing

COLUMBIA, -- It is now nine years since Missouri scientists first exposed the harmless-looking brown spider as a poisonous culprit capable of causing death. What has been learned of the habits and dangers of this tiny villain in the meantime?

Eight deaths have been reported as the result of bites from this venomous arachnid that can stand on a quarter without hanging over the edges too far. There may have been earlier deaths from the same cause, but until the Missouri detection the brown spider had escaped serious suspicion.

The venom of the brown spider is said to be ten times as powerful as that of the rattlesnake, although the snake injects 25 to 50 times more poison when it attacks.

It is known that the brown spider lives in the southern half of the United States. it has been found no father north than Kansas and Illinois, but as far east as Atlanta. Hidden in a suitcase, the brown spider is known to have gone as far west as Southern California.

Large doses of cortisteroids have proved generally effective in the treatment of bites, as announced after tests by a team of scientists at the University of Arkansas in 1964.

A team of scientists in Kansas is investigating the treatment of bite victims and is expected to have an announcement soon.

The brown spider -- which bears the scientific name of Loxasceles reclusa -- continues to be in the news. Only recently, at the annual M. D. Day at the University of Missouri School of Medicine, Dr. Norman D. Asel, professor of dermatology at the medical school, spoke on "The Treatment of Brown Spider Bites." Dr. Asel said a dozen or more bite victims have been treated at the Medical Center in recent years. In connection with the M. D. Day program was a photographic display arranged by Dr. Curtis W. Wingo, professor of entomology at the University, who exhibited pictures of the brown spider in various post-embryonic stages. He had a hand in revealing the true nature of the brown spider, and has a large collection of the species.

The brown spider, easily identified by the black violin-shaped area extending from head toward thorax, was found by the Missouri investigators to be a close relative of a poisonous brown spider in South America which had been known for some years. Until 1957, it was presumed that the infamous black widow was the only deadly spider in the United States.

The North American version might have continued in its cloak of anonymity and deceptive innocence had it not been for the suspicions of the late Dr. James A. Atkins, formerly a practicing physician in Columbia who was also a part-time teacher of pathology at the University's School of Medicine. Late in 1954 he related his suspicions to colleagues, and three members of the faculty joined him in research. They were Dr. Wingo; Dr. William A. Sodeman, at that time chairman of the department of medicine and now dean of the Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia; and the late Dr. Joseph E. Flynn, who was chairman of pathology.

Their findings cast the long-ignored brown spider in a new light, that of a definite menace suddenly exposed to widespread scrutiny.

A long siege of pain and suffering awaits the bite victim who neglects prompt treatment. Dr. Asel, in his recent talk, traced the deteriorating stages of the unattended bite wound. The initial symptom produced by the bite is a stinging or burning sensation, which some persons may not take seriously at first. Pain begins in one or two hours and progresses for the next 12 to 15 hours. A tiny blister forms at the site of the bite, around which a zone of redness widens. This zone becomes firm after 24 to 48 hours. Usually, 36 hours after the bite the individual will experience pain in the joints, nausea and vomiting. In some cases, severe systemic reactions may occur with temperatures rising to 105 degrees. Destruction of red blood cells (hemolysis) and severe anemia may occur and complicated kidney problems may appear. Within one or two weeks a gangrenous condition develops in the area of the bite, and dead tissue will slough, requiring weeks to heal.

ANN LANDERS

Answers Your Questions

Dear Ann Landers: Am I living in the dark ages or do I expect too much of my husband? Cocktail parties are my problem.

We walk into a cocktail party and off my husband goes for an hour or two or three. Occasionally, he'll whiz by and shout, "How are you doing?" But he's gone before I'm able to reply, "I'm doing absolutely lousy, thank you. I've been trapped by the world's biggest bores and my feet are killing me."

When I tell my husband I hate being stranded at cocktail parties but I could tolerate them if he would stay with me, he replies, "I don't like them myself, but it's an opportunity to make important contacts and just being seen is good for business. I can talk to YOU at home."

Am I being immature, as my husband insists? What can I do to cure him of abandoning me at these grueling affairs?
---------IGNORED WIFE

Dear Wife: You have two choices, Lady. Either go to the cocktail parties with your husband and be prepared to fend off the bores, or stay at home where you probably will feel twice as sorry for youself?

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a 14-year - old girl who is writing to you because if I confessed this to anyone they'd think I was nuts.

This summer I went to Norway with my parents. So many wonderful things happened on the trip. When I came home, I felt all grown up.

Before I went away I hated doing dishes and making beds, and cooking and baking. Now I find housekeeping is a lot of fun. And do you know why? Because I pretend I am grown up and the house is mine. I even have an imaginary husband.

Do you think I am crazy, Ann?
-----MISS PRETEND

Dear Miss: No, I don't. It's fun to pretend. And as long as you KNOW you are pretending there is no harm in it. As it says in the song, if you want your dream to come true, you have to have a dream.

I'm printing your letter in the hope that other teen-agers who hate housework might get an idea. (If it works, millions of mothers will bless you!)

Dear Ann Landers: Last September I married a divorcee who has an 18-year-old son. Before we were married, she pursuaded me to permit the boy to live with us until February when he would volunteer for the army.

February has come and gone and the boy is still here. He is mouthy, insolent, arrogant and he also is wrecking our marriage.

When I came from work tonight my wife was crying. She said the boy had been baiting her all day. They argue constantly and he gets on her nerves but she has never disciplined him.

The boy has a job and is self-supporting. He gets along fairly well with his father who is unmarried. I feel he should go live there. I hate to make my wife choose between the boy and me, but that's the way things are headed. What is your opinion of this mess?
-----ON THE EDGE

Dear Edge: Remind your wife of the agreement that the boy would leave in February. But don't give her an ultimatum. It could wreck your marriage. Speak your piece and let's hope she has sense enough to do what should have been done in February.

Do you feel ill at ease. . . . out of it? Is everybody having a good time but you? Write for Ann Landers' booklet, "The Key To Popularity," enclosing with your request 35¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Tests And on Slaying Suspect

JACKSON -- Phillip O. Clark, charged with murder in the shooting of Mrs. Zola Clifton of Cape Girardeau Oct. 1, has been returned to the Cape Girardeau county jail after undergoing mental examination at the State Hospital at Fulton.

No report from doctors has been received, it was reported by Magistrate Roland G. Busch, who granted the defense request for the examination.

Preliminary hearing has not been held pending results of the examination. The magistrate said procedure to be followed will depend on receipt of the report.

Clark was subdued by Cape Girardeau police outside the house where Mrs. Clifton died as he forced a newsboy ahead of him at gunpoint. He had held five persons hostage in the house during the night.

Cotton dyes more easily, more evenly, and with faster colors than any other fabric.

WALTER HARDEN, left, and Bob Bell, who are in the job corps in Poplar Bluff, answered questions about the organization at the Morley neighborhood service center meeting.

Job Corps Enrollees Speak

MORLEY -- There was a meeting Tuesday at 2:30 p.m. in the Central Scott County Neighborhood Service Center meeting room, with the four centers of Scott county represented.

Those present were Paul Huey and Mrs. Maurene Tidmore of Oran, Mrs. Margie Wiggens and Mrs. Helen Hopper, of Sikeston, Mrs. Myrtis Greer, Mrs. Mary Bain and Mrs. Louise Harris of Scott City, Mrs. Joe L. Davis, Mrs. Bill Anderson and Mrs. Phillip Newman of Morley.

Chip Schmerbauch asked the centers to encourage all boys and girls, who are in need of an education and job training in Scott county, to enter the job corps. John Noll, head of the job corps in Kansas City, was present and two boys, Bob Bell and Walter Harden from the job corps in Poplar Bluff.

The group questioned the boys about their food and entertainment. Bell has been in the job corps three months and Harden nine months.

Everet Woods Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Everet Woods Sr., will leave for the job corps Monday. He will be stationed in Lincoln, Neb.

A romper room for children, 4-5, will begin Monday at the Center, Monday-Thursday from 1 p.m. - 3 p.m.

If anyone has been missed on the survey which was conducted by the center and has a $3000 or less net income they may come to the center and a form will be filled out for them. A total of $350 may be added for each child living in the home.

Bogus Bills Are Seized

PARAGOULD, Ark. -- Jerry Frank Barrow, 33, of Arbyrd, Mo., was arrested at a tavern Tuesday night and officers said that they confiscated $240 in bogus $20 bills which they found on Barrow.

Assistant Police Chief Lloyd Jessie Gramlin and Ray Mapton Hill, who along with officers made the arrest, said the man is the father of six children.

Officers questioned Barrow Wednesday and then turned him over to the U.S. Secret Service.

Old Records Reveal Unusual Death Causes

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) -- In the process of gathering old records together and photographing them for compact storage, Missouri's new records management agency came up with some dandies.

Secy. of State James C. Kirkpatrick, who oversees the records center, reported some of them, including these from old vital statistic records of death causes:

Went to bed feeling well, but woke up dead.

"Died suddenly. Nothing serious."

"Don't know. Died without the aid of a physician."

"Blow on the head with an ax. Contributory cause, another man's wife."

"Had never been fatally ill before."

WHEN A LOVELY CHICK LIKE PRINCESS SNOWFLOWER SENDS AN S.O.S. NEITHER SNOW, NOR SLEET NOR RED TROOPS CAN SIDETRACK STEVE CANYON!

Lovely Princess Snowflower, dethroned ruler of the tiny Kingdom of Damma, has radioed the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency for help.

The Red Chinses have repeatedly blown up the ice on the Lake of the Black Wind, the only highway by which her people can return their herds to the lowland grazing land.

Princess Snowflower suggests that Steve Canyon be given the assignment of aiding her, since he knows the people and terrain of tiny Damma.

Col. Canyon, in turn, calls on the U.S. Seabees for help. They build a portable pontoon bridge, to be flown to the mountains by the USAF and dropped onto the Lake of the Black Wind.

But how will the Red Chinese react? How will this mission end?

You'll find out in the exciting and dramatic new story coming up in -

Am I being immature, as my husband insists? What can I do to cure him of abandoning me at these grueling affairs?
---------IGNORED WIFE

Dear Wife: You have two choices, Lady. Either go to the cocktail parties with your husband and be prepared to fend off the bores, or stay at home where you probably will feel twice as sorry for youself?

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a 14-year - old girl who is writing to you because if I confessed this to anyone they'd think I was nuts.

This summer I went to Norway with my parents. So many wonderful things happened on the trip. When I came home, I felt all grown up.

Before I went away I hated doing dishes and making beds, and cooking and baking. Now I find housekeeping is a lot of fun. And do you know why? Because I pretend I am grown up and the house is mine. I even have an imaginary husband.

Do you think I am crazy, Ann?
-----MISS PRETEND

Dear Miss: No, I don't. It's fun to pretend. And as long as you KNOW you are pretending there is no harm in it. As it says in the song, if you want your dream to come true, you have to have a dream.

I'm printing your letter in the hope that other teen-agers who hate housework might get an idea. (If it works, millions of mothers will bless you!)

Dear Ann Landers: Last September I married a divorcee who has an 18-year-old son. Before we were married, she pursuaded me to permit the boy to live with us until February when he would volunteer for the army.

February has come and gone and the boy is still here. He is mouthy, insolent, arrogant and he also is wrecking our marriage.

When I came from work tonight my wife was crying. She said the boy had been baiting her all day. They argue constantly and he gets on her nerves but she has never disciplined him.

The boy has a job and is self-supporting. He gets along fairly well with his father who is unmarried. I feel he should go live there. Ihate to make my wife choose between the boy and me, but that's the way things are headed. What is your opinion of this mess?
-----ON THE EDGE

Dear Edge: Remind your wife of the agreement that the boy would leave in February. But don't give her an ultimatum. It could wreck your marriage. Speak your piece and let's hope she has sense enough to do what should have been done in February.

Do you feel ill at ease. . . . out of it? Is everybody having a good time but you? Write for Ann Landers' booklet, "The Key To Popularity," enclosing with your request 35¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Tests And on Slaying Suspect

JACKSON -- Phillip O. Clark, charged with murder in the shooting of Mrs. Zola Clifton of Cape Girardeau Oct. 1, has been returned to the Cape Girardeau county jail after undergoing mental examination at the State Hospital at Fulton.

No report from doctors has been received, it was reported by Magistrate Roland G. Busch, who granted the defense request for the examination.

Preliminary hearing has not been held pending results of the examination. The magistrate said procedure to be followed will depend on receipt of the report.

Clark was subdued by Cape Girardeau police outside the house where Mrs. Clifton died as he forced a newsboy ahead of him at gunpoint. He had held five persons hostage in the house during the night.

Cotton dyes more easily, more evenly, and with faster colors than any other fabric.

Job Corps Enrollees Speak

MORLEY -- There was a meeting Tuesday at 2:30 p.m. in the Central Scott County Neighborhood Service Center meeting room, with the four centers of Scott county represented.

Those present were Paul Huey and Mrs. Maurene Tidmore of Oran, Mrs. Margie Wiggens and Mrs. Helen Hopper, of Sikeston, Mrs. Myrtis Greer, Mrs. Mary Bain and Mrs. Louise Harris of Scott City, Mrs. Joe L. Davis, Mrs. Bill Anderson and Mrs. Phillip Newman of Morley.

Chip Schmerbauch asked the centers to encourage all boys and girls, who are in need of an education and job training in Scott county, to enter the job corps. John Noll, head of the job corps in Kansas City, was present and two boys, Bob Bell and Walter Harden from the job corps in Poplar Bluff.

The group questioned the boys about their food and entertainment. Bell has been in the job corps three months and Harden nine months.

Everet Woods Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Everet Woods Sr., will leave for the job corps Monday. He will be stationed in Lincoln, Neb.

A romper room for children, 4-5, will begin Monday at the Center, Monday-Thursday from 1 p.m. - 3 p.m.

If anyone has been missed on the survey which was conducted by the center and has a $3000 or less net income they may come to the center and a form will be filled out for them. A total of $350 may be added for each child living in the home.

Bogus Bills Are Seized

PARAGOULD, Ark. -- Jerry Frank Barrow, 33, of Arbyrd, Mo., was arrested at a tavern Tuesday night and officers said that they confiscated $240 in bogus $20 bills which they found on Barrow.

Assistant Police Chief Lloyd Jessie Gramlin and Ray Mapton Hill, who along with officers made the arrest, said the man is the father of six children.

Officers questioned Barrow Wednesday and then turned him over to the U.S. Secret Service.

Old Records Reveal Unusual Death Causes

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) -- In the process of gathering old records together and photographing them for compact storage, Missouri's new records management agency came up with some dandies.

Secy. of State James C. Kirkpatrick, who oversees the records center, reported some of them, including these from old vital statistic records of death causes:

Went to bed feeling well, but woke up dead.

"Died suddenly. Nothing serious."

"Don't know. Died without the aid of a physician."

"Blow on the head with an ax. Contributory cause, another man's wife."

"Had never been fatally ill before."

WHEN A LOVELY CHICK LIKE PRINCESS SNOWFLOWER SENDS AN S.O.S. NEITHER SNOW, NOR SLEET NOR RED TROOPS CAN SIDETRACK STEVE CANYON!

Lovely Princess Snowflower, dethroned ruler of the tiny Kingdom of Damma, has radioed the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency for help.

The Red Chinses have repeatedly blown up the ice on the Lake of the Black Wind, the only highway by which her people can return their herds to the lowland grazing land.

Princess Snowflower suggests that Steve Canyon be given the assignment of aiding her, since he knows the people and terrain of tiny Damma.

Col. Canyon, in turn, calls on the U.S. Seabees for help. They build a portable pontoon bridge, to be flown to the mountains by the USAF and dropped onto the Lake of the Black Wind.

But how will the Red Chinese react? How will this mission end?

You'll find out in the exciting and dramatic new story coming up in -

O'Star Of Wonder!

Half an hour ago at 5:30 p.m., we sat down to write an article for this page on the story of Christmas. The lights flickered once, then began to dim. While we dug out candlesticks and candles -- birthday, Christmas, party, pinescented and just plain old candles -- the lights grew dimmer and dimmer until they suddenly went out and it was night.

What darkness seems how to press in upon us from outside! The only light in the neighborhood is the ancient gas lantern hanging at the entrance of the Players Club next door. There are no street lights, no house lights, no traffic lights, no refrigerators working, no stoves, no air conditioners, no television or radio, no subways, elevators or trains

No one knows yet what has happened, why it has happened, nor how long we will be without power. Housewives, with dinner half cooked, are no doubt being reconciled to opening a can of something later on when the much - delayed and weary loved ones get home.

The skyscrapers, usually blazing with light, are dark shadows against the skyline now, with here and there a tiny twinkling candlelight, like Shakespeare's "good deed in a naughty world."

This is being written in the golden radiance of eight candles! The furniture gleams and the brass glows mellowly in this most ancient of lights, but the night presses in and one is aware of thick darkness.

All about us are people suffering extreme inconvenience. Elevators are stalled 50, 60, 80 stores up. Subway riders are trapped below ground, and on the surface tens of thousands are trapped in cars and buses in the gigantic traffic jam which has the city locked from the Hudson to the East River.

Turning back into the room, one begins to have an inkling of how our ancestor lived when tapers were the only light, and were expensive, and when many a home made do with a tallow dip, a bulrush stuck in a pewter holder, or the glow from the hearth.

They were terrified of ghostly shapes and forms and monstrous beats which inhabited the night, looking for the souls and bodies of men and bent on destroying them. Even the night air they called pestilential and feared to venture out into it.

Just now there are voices in the street. We move to the window. "Did you ever see anything like it?" asks a disembodied voice." Bright as day," says another. "What?" I ask. "The moon!" they chorus.

And there she is, sailing over Manhattan, scattering our darkness, companioned by the lovely Venus, the evening star. We are seeing what has not been seen by New Yorkers within living memory -- the stars!

Now we know we can write about Christmas after all. About the heavenly Child, the Morning Star, the Sun of Righteousness, "at whose bright presence, darkness flies away."

He came to the darkness of our hearts and our world so that there never need be night again. He comes to your heart and to mine this Christmas week with beauty and grace and love.

May we reflect His grace as we work at all the happy tasks of the season, praying, with all of God's family all over the world:

"Guide us through the darkness
Of the lonely night,
Shining still before us,
With Thy kindly light,
Until every nation,
Whether bond or free,
'Neath Thy starlit banner,

DEATH

stated that he also investigated the scene the morning of Feb. 2. He stated that a bullet was found embedded in a kitchen cabinet. Lt. Stone and Michael strung a string from outside the window to the cabinet to determine the path of the bullet.

The bullet entered the storm window at a height of 5 feet 10 inches from the ground, Michael said. He continued that the temperature the night of Feb. 1 was about 0 degrees Fahrenheit and four to six inches of snow covered the ground in Sikeston. Snow was packed around the Lewis home.

Herman Henry, 110 West Wakefield, Sikeston, was called to the stand. He is an occasional dealer in coins. Henry testified that he sold a $20 gold piece dated 1914 to Bill Lewis, the dead woman's son, prior to the night of Feb. 1. Henry said the coin was dented and was in a gold band container when Lewis purchased it.

He identified the coin, entered as an exhibit, as the one sold to Lewis.

Defense attorney asked Henry if he knew how many $20 gold coins were issued in 1914. Henry replied that he did not.

The defense then asked if a similar dent or mark could not have been made on another gold coin. Henry responded that he didn't know.

The next witness called was James Harrington, 204 Felker, who stated he was Thompson's buddy.

Harrington stated that Thompson gave him a $20 gold piece and told him to see if he could spend it. Harrington said he told Thompson he could not. So, Harrington said, Thompson said he (Harrington, could keep the coin.

Harrington continued that he gave the coin to his mother, Mrs. Mattie Harrington.

Harrington said he received the coin from Thompson two or three days before he (Harrington) made a sworn statement to Fielding Potashnick on Feb. 20, 1965.

In the sworn statement Harrington said Thompson had told him he got the coin from his stepfather.

Potashnick asked Harrington where he was the night of Feb. 1, 1965. Harrington replied he didn't remember, but thought he was at a basketball game in Jackson.

Bill Lewis, Sikeston, the son of Mrs. W. R. Lewis, stated that he was the first person to find his mother's body at about 7 a.m. Feb. 2.

Lewis said he was living at the residence when the death occurred, but had left at about 7 p.m. the preceding night. He said he did not return until 7 the following morning. Lewis stated that he found the door had been broken and found his mother's body.

In connection with the gold coin, Lewis stated that he only had one such coin, and he kept it in a cuff link box in the bedroom. He said he noticed that it was missing the day after the slaying.

The last time he remembered seeing it was between Jan. 10 and 20, 1965, Lewis said.

When questioned by the defense, Lewis stated that his mother was alone in the house when he left the night of Feb. 1, 1965, and no one else was in the house when he found her body the following morning.

Missouri Press Report

Sen. Edward V. Long

Schools and firms in Missouri are expected to attract $1,480,557 in research funds from the U. S. Department of the Interior during the 1967 fiscal year, the latest figures show.

This will be $139,848 less than Missouri received in fiscal year 1965.

Included in these figures are $957,000 in research funds for the Bureau of Mines and Metallurgy Center at Rolla. One of only eight in the nation, the Center specializes in steels, light metals, and base metals.

The Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife expects to conduct approximately the same amount of research in the new year as they did in 1965 and 1966. The 1966 figure was $190,000.

The University of Missouri will be conducting archaeological research with $23,900 in National Park Service funds. Research now in progress is expected to continue at the Stockton and Kaysinger Bluff reservoir sites, and in Mississippi and New Madrid counties. New research is scheduled at the new Smithville Reservoir site.

The U. S. Geological Survey now expects to conduct topographic, geologic, and water resource studies in Missouri with approximately $82,000 during 1967. Last year the Survey used $75,800 for these purposes in our State.

The Department of the Interior now estimates that Missouri will receive a total of $14,901,335 from the Department's 12 separate bureaus and agencies for all purposes -- including the $1,480,557 for research.

This total figure includes approximately $3.8 million allocated for Southwestern Power Administration in Missouri and $1.2 million allocated for the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation in Missouri.

The final report for Fiscal Year 1966 shows that 20 Missouri towns received Federal assistance for construction of waste treatment works and sewer overflow control. The total Federal share of this work was $2,957,592. These grants are administered by the U. S. Water Pollution Control Administration which now is a part of the Department of the Interior.

CHRISTMAS DECORATIONS NEW DO-IT-YOURSELF FAD

Americans with creative spirit are finding a new outlet -- they have revived an old fashioned interest in making their own Christmas decorations.

Personally - made wreaths, centerpieces and other colorful ornaments are gaining popularity, and Raymond Grenier, Christmas decorations buyer for F. W. Woolworth Co., says many variety and department stores have a how-to-do-it booklet and the materials needed to make the decorative arrangements.

You can choose from a wide variety of styrofoam shapes -- cones, blocks, rings and spheres -- on which to build, using decorative adornments available in the stores and following instructions in the booklet that gives step-by-step information.

"From talking with customers, we know that personal creation of attractive and seemingly complicated decorations, such as table and mantel centerpieces and wreaths for doors, will reach record proportions this year," the Woolworth buyer reports. "Many people intend to make them as gifts."

Among many decorations outlined in the booklet is a pine cone and holly wreath, using sprays of artificial holly and pine cones and a wide, red ribbon, attractively built on a ring of the lightweight, styrofoam base.

Long Climb Wasted

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) -- City firemen made a 28-story climb to find they had responded to a false alarm.

Firemen sped to the 30-story Xerox Corp. building, now under construction in downtown Rochester, after receiving a call that flames had been spotted on the 28th floor.

The building's electricity was turned off and the elevators were inoperative, so they began hauling hoses and other fire-fighting equipment up the staircase in four-degree-above-zero weather.

A Christmas Tree

By Mabel Grey Gehring

"Chrissie, tell us again about Christmas trees." This from one child. And from another, "Are they as big as regular trees?"

Chrissie replied, "Some of them are only as tall as a person's elbow, but they're all bonny when they get trimmed up."

At this moment a young girl entered through the half-open door and three shrill voices addressed her eagerly. "Annie, did you ever see a Christmas tree? Chrissie has seen lots of them."

Annie nodded. "Yes, when I was at school in Edinburgh." Then glancing toward a proffered chair, "No, I can't stay. Just dropped in to see how you're getting along."

This was on a Scottish island, where Chrissie, back on a visit, had grown up. She turned now to the children, saying, "I'll go a bit of the way with Annie. I'll be back soon."

Another minute and they were walking down a lovely lane -- a murmuring stream on one side, a hedge of honeysuckle and wild roses on the other. Said Chrissie, "I'm glad I can help Peter out like this. When his housekeeper had to leave unexpectedly and he had no one to take care of his bairns, he thought he'd have to miss some important meeting on the mainland. The relief on his face when I offered was a grand sicht. Oh, Annie, if I'd only had more sense 20 years ago -- at your age -- I'd have married him when he asked me. But no, I was full of ambition -- sure I could be successful as a fashion model."

"Well, you are -- one of the best, they say. And you're entertained at the swankiest houses in London."

Chrissie sighed. "How easily I'd give all that up-- how very easily. Well, I'd better be retracing steps now -- my young people might be up to something."

And they were! Longing to have a Christmas tree, right away, they had rummaged among their own small possessions and tied them on the branches of a potted plant in the parlor -- a plant with a thick stem and rubbery leaves. They were gazing at it in puzzled silence as Chrissie came in and one of them quizzed, "Is it as bonny as it should be?"

She shook her head, the tears glistening. Then she stated with determination, "Wait until Christmas and you'll have a real tree."

"How do you know we'll have one?" "Where would it come from?" "How would it get into the house?" All three were speaking at once.

"Never mind now. It'll be here. Now not another question do I won't answer."

The youngest child was staring at her solemnly. Then he said, "We like Chrissie."

She caught him close with a smothered, "Oh Peter." Then she added, briskly, "Get brushed up, all of you. Your dad will be here shortly."

Peter arrived within the hour and soon afterwards Chrissie went back to the Royal George Inn, where she had a room. On the way there she stopped at her young friend's house. "Annie," she announced, "I'm going to ship in a Christmas tree for the youngsters. Will you hide it until Peter picks it up?" Then wistfully, "How'd love to see their faces. ."

Annie was a natural matchmaker, so she decided to do something about this situation. The following evening, therefore, she went to the post office at the same time Peter usually came for his mail. When he appeared she went straight to the point with a flat statement. "You and the bairns will certainly miss Chrissie when she goes."

"Aye," glumly "that we will."

"Then why don't you persuade her to stay?"

"That wouldna be respectable."

"Oh, I mean ask her to marry you."

"Annie, I wouldna have the effrontry -- her wi' London ken?" To which she retorted, "That's for you to find out." And away she hasted.

The next morning, Sunday, as Annie approached church, Chrissie was coming from the other direction. She held up her left hand on which was Peter's signet ring and whispered jubilantly, "We're to be married in Glasgow and we'll take a wee jaunt but be back the week before Christmas and we'll come for the tree and get it into the house after dark and we'll do the decorating Christmas Eve and. . ."

The bells which had been pealing for fifteen minutes halted abruptly. Conversation between the two also halted abruptly, but each had an air of quiet contentment as mounting the steps they entered into the peaceful old building.

WE'D BE A COLONY

(Humorist Sam Levenson)

When I asked my father for an allowance, he said, "You mean I should pay you for living at home?" Now kids not only want an allowance, but a guaranteed minimum wage. . . .

All kids are a little mix. Let's face this: I believe we are penalizing the kid who is a genuine individual by telling him he is maladjusted. We train him to be a fancy hypocrite by the time he is 8. If George Washington had been well adjusted, we'd be a British colony today.

Papal coinage was inaugurated under Pope Adrian II, who ruled from 772 to 795.

When I heard the knock on the door the other night, I called out, "Come in, sweetheart, my husband isn't home!" Again the knocking, very hard this time.

"Come in, sweetheart, my husband isn't home," I repeated.

KRISTINA MYERS, four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter C. Myers of Canalou, helps her mother prepare a recipe.

Mrs. Peter C. Myers' Hobby Is Teaching Area Children

Editor's Note: This is the 15th in a series of articles about the homelife of Sikeston area families.

By Ruth Dillender

CANALOU - Mrs. Mary Myers said that children are her favorite hobby. She spends much of her free time working in the Canalou 4-H Club.

Mrs. Myers, her husband, Peter, and their four children, Joseph, 10, Peter, Jr., almost nine now, Kristina, four, and Gretchen, one year old, live on a farm two miles southeast of here. Myers is Missouri's outstanding young farmer.

Although born in Racine, Wis. Mrs. Myers claims Southeast Missouri as her home. Mrs. Myers says teaching all children of the area and county to be responsible citizens is her hope. In the Myers home, the family sings around the piano and plays together. Mrs. Myers likes to work in the yard with her flowers but does not raise a vegetable garden.

She is a member of the Sikeston community choir and a former Sunday School teacher.

The Canalou 4-H club of which Mrs. Myers is community leader, helped to sponsor the swimming lesson program in August for area children and taught more than 90 children to swim. The club has an enrollment of 50.

The three older Myers children are welcome to use the kitchen to bake with an agreement that they clean up their mess and Mrs. Myers stays far away.

The children are experts, particularly the boys, with gelatine box mixes and salads.

Their mother said that this is "quite a help especially on the days we have to go to Sikeston for dance lessons, piano lessons, doctors' appointments, as they all do their share and happily."

Mrs. Myers proudly recalls that the children prepared a charcoal broiled steak dinner and two layer chocolate cake for her birthday.

Some of the Myers' favorite recipes are:

CREAMED MEATBALLS

Blend:
1 can cream of mushroom soup
1/2 cup water

Mix:
1/4 cup of above soup mixture and 1 lb ground beef.
2 tablespoons minced onion
1 tablespoon minced parsley
1 slightly beaten egg

Make:
16 meatballs and brown in shortening in skillet

Pour off fat, add rest of soup mixture.

Cover and simmer about 15 minutes; stir often. Serves six.

PLANTATION CASSEROLE

Mix 2 cups cut - up left-over (cooked) meat
1-1/2 cups canned vegetables (or left - overs)
1 lb. can cream - style corn
1/4 lb process American Cheese (cut into small pieces 3/4 cup)
1/3 cup evaporated milk
1 small diced onion
1 tablespoon Worchestershire sauce

Pour into a greased 12 x 8" baking dish. Bake in 400 degree oven for about 10 minutes, or until bubbly at edges.

Mix well 1 cup biscuit mix.
1/2 cup corn meal
2 tablespoon sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 egg
2/3 cup evaporated milk

Pour on hot mixture, leaving center uncovered. Spread to edges. Bake 20 minutes, or until golden brown. Serves six.

Mrs. Myers adds:

You can use the first mixture for a quick meal or lunch, serving it over hot buttered toast or canned biscuits.

Try tuna fish for a change omitting the corn.

LEMON DESSERT

Line bottom of 13x9-1/2 x2" baking dish with one recipe graham cracker crust.

Mix:
1 package lemon jello
1 cup hot water
3 tablespoon lemon juice.

Cream:
3 oz. cream cheese
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla

Mix together (medium speed mixer):
Lemon mixture
Creamed mixture

Whip:
1 large chilled can condensed milk. Use large mixing bowl.

Add: Other mixture to whipped condensed milk; mix together medium speed mixer.

Let set, two hours (much less if put in freezer). Serves 12.

Mrs. Myers suggests that for a variation, try chocolate wafer crust, lime juice, lime Jello with chocolate slivers on top.

HOLIDAY CREAM TORTE

Spread 1 cup (36) crushed vanilla wafers in bottom of 9" square pan.

Combine and cream well (low speed mixer):
1/2 lb. softened butter-or margarine for dieters.
2 cups sifted confectioners sugar

Add: (high speed mixer)
4 eggs - one at a time to mixture and beat until well blended slight separating of mixture is normal.

Stir:
1/2 cup finely chopped almonds.

Spoon:
Mixture over crushed wafers in pan.

Again crush:
1 cup (36) vanilla wafers and this time sprinkle 3/4 of the cup on top of mixture. Save 1/4 cup.

Beat:
1 cup of whipping cream (1) envelope Dream Whip for dieters, until thick and fold in 1/4 cup each (2 oz. each) diced green and red maraschino cherries. Spread this over crushed wafers.

Sprinkle 1/4 cup crushed wafers over cream and garnish with whole cherries.

Refrigerate 12 or more hours or freeze for future use.

Dip knife in hot water to cut.

Serves nine.

Grieving Actress Develops Pneumonia

THOUSAND OAKS, CALIF. (AP) - Actress Jayne Mansfield, who has spent the last 10 days at the hospital bedside of her 6-year-old son, has developed viral pneumonia.

Miss Mansfield's physician said the actress became weakened as she stayed with her son, Zoltan Hargitay, at Conejo Valley Community Hospital.

AT POTLATCH, A TREE CAN BE A 120 YEAR INVESTMENT IN TOMORROW

How far ahead can businessmen plan? At Potlatch, current decisions are based on average crop maturity cycles of 60 to 120 years. Some seedlings of today will not be ready for harvesting until the year 2026. Seedlings on other Potlatch timberlands will not reach full maturity until the year 2086. During the interim, Potlatch will protect these growing resources against disease, fire, insects and other dangers. Present methods of timber protection will be supplemented by new techniques that are constantly being developed. This is the kind of long range planning that Potlatch continues to invest in over a million acres of growing assets.

Potlatch sells: Bleached Paperboard, Bleached Pulp, Boards, Building Components, Business Papers, Corrugated Containers, Cut Stock, Dimension Lumber, Display Stands, EMSR Lumber, Facial Tissues, Fencing, Food Trays, Furniture Parts, Hardwoods, Industrial Woods, Laminated Beams and Decking, Moudlings, Paper Milk Cartons, Oak Flooring, Paneling, Paper Cups, Paper Napkins, Paper Plates, Place Mats, Plywood, Pre-Cut Utility Buildings, Pres-to-logs, Printing Papers, Siding, Specialty Papers, Toilet Tissue.

Mr. and Mrs. Clymouth Watkins, 306 Benton, received word from their son, Bobby Watkins, stationed at Las Vegas, Nev., that he had been promoted to master sergeant Dec. 1. He completed one year's service in Viet Nam in November and connected with the 12th Air Force after receiving early training at Tampa, Fla.

Computers to Give County Breakdown on Aid

WASHINGTON (AP) - Have you ever wondered how much federal government money is being spent in your county?

If you did, chances are you would have had an extremely difficult time finding out. It's doubtful you can find out now. But things may change.

The Office of Economic Opportunity, the federal anti-poverty agency, is required by law to develop an information system which will permit anyone interested to find out what programs affecting the poor and their cost are being conducted in every one of the 3,500 counties in the United States.

The computerized system worked so well for the anti-poverty agency, the OEO decided to expand it to include all programs of other agencies in the government, not only those relating to the poor.

Thus far, the system includes partial information on the activities of 12 departments and agencies that have reported on 163 programs.

But, assures John Johnson, acting director of the OEO's information center, 85 per cent of all the government's programs will be listed by January. "Once we get that far, it will be simple to shoot for a 100 per cent system," he said.

The national agency summary currently includes programs conducted by the Departments of Agriculture, Commerce, Welfare, Housing, Interior, Justice, and Labor, in addition to the Federal Aviation Agency, General Services Administration, Office of Economic Opportunity, Small Business Administration and the Veterans Administration.

Next month, Johnson said, Defense Department programs will be added to the catologue.

"This accomplishment is one of the really big things attempted by government," Sargent Shriver, director of the OEO, told newsmen. "This is possibly the dawn of a new era. "This will bring into Washington all the information local officials need to find out what's going on in their area and in other areas. In this way, they can make comparisons to see what is available and what they are not getting."

Recovered Heart Pump Patient to Return to Work

MEXICO CITY (AP) - Esperanza del Valle Vasquez, the first person to survive surgery with an artifical heart pump, plans to return to her job as a beautician in Mexico City this week or next.

"I feel marvelous," she said, "I can do almost anything I want now, walk without getting tired and eat anything. It is so marvelous just to be alive."

Mrs. Vasquez, 37, underwent heart surgery in Houston, Tex., Aug. 8 to have two valves in her heart replaced.

A team of doctors led by Dr. Michael DeBakey planted a dome-shaped left ventricle by-pass pump in Mrs. Vasquez' right side near her waist to keep her blood circulating while her own heart recovered. The pump was in place for 10 days. In four other similar operations, the patients died of complications.

Mrs. Vasquez left Texas Sept. 7 and returned to the modest home in Mexico City she shares with her sister's family. She rested and had frequent checks by her cardiologist, Dr. Theodoro E. Ceserman.

"I still go to the doctor twice a week," Mrs. Vasquez said, "but it is not because anything is wrong. He just wants to talk to me and that's a privilge for me. Dr. Ceserman is the most wonderful man in the world. He convinced me to have the operation and now I owe him my life."

Mrs. Vasquez, who has an 8-ear-old son, said her recuperation has caused no problems and she has no immediate plans to return to Houston.

George Robson, who won the Indianapolis Speedway auto race one year: "All I had to do was keep turning left."

Hayti Approved for Planning Grant

WASHINGTON AP -- The Housing and Urban Development Department has announced the approval of grants to Missouri of $54,225 to aid Marion, Monroe and Ralls counties, and Palmyra, Monroe City, Paris, New London, Liberty, Hayti, and Clarksville, in their comprehensive planning programs.

COFFEE CORNER by Cherie

BY CHERIE WEDNESDAY
THREE WEEKS BEFORE CHRISTMAS
OR
A HOUSEWIVE'S DECEMBER LAMENT

'Twas three weeks before Xmas and all through the house
stirred one wretched creature, and that was Charles' spouse.
Who dug out the stockings with a hole in their side,
Who washed them, and darned them, and hung them up high.
Who chased after children who should be in bed,
But more often than IN, were found UNDER instead!
Who bought all the gifts, and dug out the wrapping,
And tied pretty bows when she should have been napping.
Who stuffed presents inside of boxes too small,
And cut paper too short for those too tall,
Who fussed, and who fumed and who struggled like mad,
To find something original this year for Dad.
Who got out the sugar, the pots, and the pans,
And prepared to make candy, and burned both her hands.
Who found she'd forgotten to buy at the store,
At least half her ingredients, so rushed back for more
Of the nuts, and the spices, with the prices so high,
That her year's Xmas budget is shot to the sky!
Then back to the house, and the stove, and the sink,
And the candy bright red, that turned out sick pink.
To the caramels all gooey, that never got hard,
And the poor Xmas cookies without enough lard.
To the nuts she was salting when called by wee folk,
Then returned to the oven mid funnels of smoke,
The nuts are a loss, those she won't again try,
She's picked out her last, she thinks with a sigh.
It's time to quit baking, and now find a tree,
And please dear Santa, let it be the first she'll see,
And instead of on bottom, tied good and tight,
So to even get near it presents quite a fight,
Let it be standing so straight and so tall,
Let it fit in the tree stand without even one fall.
But this is just wishing, t'will never come true,
For trees nowadays all have branches too few.
So get what you can, and turn to the wall
The limbs that are missing, just hang many a ball
In the voids that are left by this year's pine,
Because after you've trimmed it, it will turn out fine.
In fact, to the wee ones who will gaze on with awe,
It will seem like the grandest tree they ever saw.
So now out to the front porch to string up the light,
And hold tight to the ladder, for Charles falls out of sight.
Set out the holly, the candles, the sleighs,
Will she get it all done in these last few days?
The big Eve has come, get the children all down,
And sneak to the closet to see what can be found.
Why it's Batman and Robin and trucks of hard steel,
And dozens of toys that work just like real,
With batteries, directions, and screws that don't fit,
No wonder the lady is all in a twit!
But at least it is over, she can join in the fun,
Till the day after tomorrow, when the cleaning up must be done.
So she heads for the covers, cold cream on her face,
And relaxes at last, after her frantic pace.
But I heard her exclaim as she turned out the light,
"Happy Christmas to all and to all a GOOD NIGHT!"

This is an absolutely delicious, easy, make ahead recipe for all hectic housewives during the month of December, and one my family always served as a finale to the Holiday dinner.

Computers to Give County Breakdown on Aid

WASHINGTON (AP) - Have you ever wondered how much federal government money is being spent in your county?

If you did, chances are you would have had an extremely difficult time finding out. It's doubtful you can find out now. But things may change.

The Office of Economic Opportunity, the federal anti-poverty agency, is required by law to develop an information system which will permit anyone interested to find out what programs affecting the poor and their cost are being conducted in every one of the 3,500 counties in the United States.

The computerized system worked so well for the anti-poverty agency, the OEO decided to expand it to include all programs of other agencies in the government, not only those relating to the poor.

Thus far, the system includes partial information on the activities of 12 departments and agencies that have reported on 163 programs.

But, assures John Johnson, acting director of the OEO's information center, 85 per cent of all the government's programs will be listed by January. "Once we get that far, it will be simple to shoot for a 100 per cent system," he said.

The national agency summary currently includes programs conducted by the Departments of Agriculture, Commerce, Welfare, Housing, Interior, Justice, and Labor, in addition to the Federal Aviation Agency, General Services Administration, Office of Economic Opportunity, Small Business Administration and the Veterans Administration.

Next month, Johnson said, Defense Department programs will be added to the catologue.

"This accomplishment is one of the really big things attempted by government," Sargent Shriver, director of the OEO, told newsmen. "This is possibly the dawn of a new era.

"This will bring into Washington all the information local officials need to find out what's going on in their area and in other areas. In this way, they can make comparisons to see what is available and what they are not getting."

Recovered Heart Pump Patient to Return to Work

MEXICO CITY (AP) - Esperanza del Valle Vasquez, the first person to survive surgery with an artifical heart pump, plans to return to her job as a beautician in Mexico City this week or next.

"I feel marvelous," she said, "I can do almost anything I want now, walk without getting tired and eat anything. It is so marvelous just to be alive."

Mrs. Vasquez, 37, underwent heart surgery in Houston, Tex., Aug. 8 to have two valves in her heart replaced.

A team of doctors led by Dr. Michael DeBakey planted a dome-shaped left ventricle by-pass pump in Mrs. Vasquez' right side near her waist to keep her blood circulating while her own heart recovered. The pump was in place for 10 days. In four other similar operations, the patients died of complications.

Mrs. Vasquez left Texas Sept. 7 and returned to the modest home in Mexico City she shares with her sister's family. She rested and had frequent checks by her cardiologist, Dr. Theodoro E. Ceserman.

"I still go to the doctor twice a week," Mrs. Vasquez said, "but it is not because anything is wrong. He just wants to talk to me and that's a privilge for me. Dr. Ceserman is the most wonderful man in the world. He convinced me to have the operation and now I owe him my life."

Mrs. Vasquez, who has an 8-ear-old son, said her recuperation has caused no problems and she has no immediate plans to return to Houston.

George Robson, who won the Indianapolis Speedway auto race one year: "All I had to do was keep turning left."

Hayti Approved for Planning Grant

COFFEE CORNER by Cherie

BY CHERIE WEDNESDAY
THREE WEEKS BEFORE CHRISTMAS
OR
A HOUSEWIVE'S DECEMBER LAMENT

'Twas three weeks before Xmas and all through the house
stirred one wretched creature, and that was Charles' spouse.
Who dug out the stockings with a hole in their side,
Who washed them, and darned them, and hung them up high.
Who chased after children who should be in bed,
But more often than IN, were found UNDER instead!
Who bought all the gifts, and dug out the wrapping,
And tied pretty bows when she should have been napping.
Who stuffed presents inside of boxes too small,
And cut paper too short for those too tall,
Who fussed, and who fumed and who struggled like mad,
To find something original this year for Dad.
Who got out the sugar, the pots, and the pans,
And prepared to make candy, and burned both her hands.
Who found she'd forgotten to buy at the store,
At least half her ingredients, so rushed back for more
Of the nuts, and the spices, with the prices so high,
That her year's Xmas budget is shot to the sky!
Then back to the house, and the stove, and the sink,
And the candy bright red, that turned out sick pink.
To the caramels all gooey, that never got hard,
And the poor Xmas cookies without enough lard.
To the nuts she was salting when called by wee folk,
Then returned to the oven mid funnels of smoke,
The nuts are a loss, those she won't again try,
She's picked out her last, she thinks with a sigh.
It's time to quit baking, and now find a tree,
And please dear Santa, let it be the first she'll see,
And instead of on bottom, tied good and tight,
So to even get near it presents quite a fight,
Let it be standing so straight and so tall,
Let it fit in the tree stand without even one fall.
But this is just wishing, t'will never come true,
For trees nowadays all have branches too few.
So get what you can, and turn to the wall
The limbs that are missing, just hang many a ball
In the voids that are left by this year's pine,
Because after you've trimmed it, it will turn out fine.
In fact, to the wee ones who will gaze on with awe,
It will seem like the grandest tree they ever saw.
So now out to the front porch to string up the light,
And hold tight to the ladder, for Charles falls out of sight.
Set out the holly, the candles, the sleighs,
Will she get it all done in these last few days?
The big Eve has come, get the children all down,
And sneak to the closet to see what can be found.
Why it's Batman and Robin and trucks of hard steel,
And dozens of toys that work just like real,
With batteries, directions, and screws that don't fit,
No wonder the lady is all in a twit!
But at least it is over, she can join in the fun,
Till the day after tomorrow, when the cleaning up must be done.
So she heads for the covers, cold cream on her face,
And relaxes at last, after her frantic pace.
But I heard her exclaim as she turned out the light,
"Happy Christmas to all and to all a GOOD NIGHT!"

This is an absolutely delicious, easy, make ahead recipe for all hectic housewives during the month of December, and one my family always served as a finale to the Holiday dinner.
